a, Morris, a grocer; b, William P., proprietor of Earle's Hotel, and father of Ferdinand P. Earle, the present proprietor; c, Alexander M. (who was with his brother Morris, 95 Front Street); and d, George S. Thomas had two sons: a, Robert, who m. 1st, Harriet Crane, and 2d, Mary Ann Smith, and lived in Jersey City, N. J.; and b, Thomas, Jr., b. Feb. 10, 1809; m. 1st, Euphemia Demarest, 2d, Cornelia Hasbrouck. Thomas, Jr., had a son Ralph, b. about 1838, who was named for one of his mother's relatives, and not for any Ralph in the Rhode Island branch. Thomas, senior, had, also, two daughters, Anna, who m. William G. Babb, and Caroline, who was unmarried when this information was received. Morris's son, Marmaduke, had issue as follows: a, Sidney; b, Anna; c, James F., who lived at Red Bank, N. J.; d, Sarah; e, Mary; f, and g, Samuel and Alfred, both ministers of the gospel; h, Henry, who lived at Oyster Bay; and i, a son who lived at Penn Yan, N. Y. There are reasons for the belief that the Morris at the head of this branch came from Nova Scotia or one of the other British provinces.

Some members of this branch retain the final e in their surname; others have dropped it.

3. There is a numerous branch of the general family in central New York, and especially in Onondaga County, who spell their surname Earll. Dr. David Earll, of Tioga Centre, to whom I applied, in 1859, for information in regard to the genealogy of this branch, replied by referring me to the late Judge Nehemiah Earll, of Syracuse, stating that he possessed "more information on the subject than any other person in the State." I have now before me three letters from Judge Nehemiah, one of them written in 1859, one in 1860, and one in 1861. In 1859 he says: "My grandfather, Daniel Earll, I knew from earliest remembrance to the time of his death. He died in April, 1817, aged 87 years. He had two brothers, Nehemiah and David: both died in this county. They had two sisters. One of them married Daniel Wallace, and the other John Ryan. My great-uncle, Nehemiah, had two daughters, but no son. David had several sons and daughters, viz.: Nathaniel, David, Peter and William. My grandfather (Daniel) lived, at an early day, in Great Barrington, Mass., where my father and his brothers were born, except the youngest, I think. I always understood that my great-grandfather was a captain in the old French war, previous to 1750. My grandfather (Daniel) had eight sons, to wit: Jonas, Daniel, Nathaniel, Robert (my father), Benjamin, Watson, Nehemiah and Abijah; and two daughters, Lucy, the wife of Isaac Danks, and Patience, the wife of Timothy Copp. * * * I saw my grandfather a short time before his death. He told me that he then had living over one hundred and fifty children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren."

In this letter the Judge says: "I am more than 72 years old."

In his letter of July 29, 1861, he says: "From information I have obtained since I last wrote you, I find that, some time previous to the year 1700, William Earll came from Wales to Rhode Island, and afterwards had two sons, Nathaniel and William; that those two sons married two sisters whose maiden names were Adams. They also had another sister, who married a Scotchman by the name of Wheeler. I am unable to learn what became of William. Nathaniel, some time after his marriage, settled in Great Barrington, Mass., and had three sons, viz.: Daniel (my grandfather), Nehemiah and David. About the year 1770 my grandfather emigrated with his family to Nova Scotia. His oldest son, Jonas, was probably married there. He married Experience Sprague. They afterwards settled at White Creek, Washington County, New York, and Daniel, Jr., returned to White Creek and married about 1776. About that time, or perhaps a year later, my grandfather and his sons Nathaniel and Robert formed a company and returned (my grandfather leaving the rest of his family in Nova Scotia) to White Creek. In the mean time my great-grandfather (Nathaniel) with his sons Nehemiah and David, had moved from Great Barrington to White Creek.

"I have a cousin now living near me. She was daughter of my uncle Jonas, and is now more than eighty-five years of age. She informs me she well recollects her great-grandfather, Nathaniel Earll, and that his son David was about her own age; that her great-grandfather was familiarly called 'Captain Nat' by their friends; that he was a large, fleshy man; and that he died about 1790."

The Judge also states that Thomas Wheeler, grandson of the Wheeler who married an Adams, sister to the wife of Daniel's father, Nathaniel, made a visit of several months to his grandmother, about 1793, in Leicester, Mass., that she often spoke of her nephew, Daniel Earll, and said that his family, on their return from Nova Scotia, remained some time with her in Leicester."

Warner Earll, a lawyer of San Luis Obispo, California, and a grandson of Judge Nehemiah's brother Robert, in a letter dated August 18, 1887, writes that he remembers Lucy Danks, daughter of Daniel, and "when a mere child, heard her relate many things occurring when she lived in Nova Scotia."

It appears to be pretty clearly shown from the above that the name of the father of Daniel Earll, of Great Barrington, was Nathaniel. Daniel died in 1817, aged, one authority says, 87 years, another 88 years. Consequently, he was born in either 1729 or 1730.

I will now point out what, at least, is a singular coincidence. William Earle [9–3, p. 28 of this book], with his sons, disappeared, so far as records are concerned, from Little Compton, R. I., in the early part of the 18th century. His fifth son was named Nathaniel [61–5]. He was born January 28, 1705, and therefore, at the birth of Daniel Earll, was 24 or 25 years old, a very suitable age to be the father of Daniel. Was he his father? There are further coincidences which render an affirmative answer not improbable. The father of the Nathaniel of Judge Earll's account was named William, and the father of the Nathaniel of Little Compton was named William. The Judge's William came from Wales to Rhode Island; Ralph, who had a son William, came, as is believed, from a point within fifty miles of Wales to Rhode Island. Any genealogist of much experience would probably say that the discrepancies between the two histories are not greater than often occur in traditional accounts. That Daniel Earll, on his return from Nova Scotia, stopped some time in Leicester, Mass., may be further mentioned as a significant coincidence, for, at that time several families of Earles, the descendants of Ralph, resided in that town.

But, whatever were its American origin, the Onondaga branch is now numerous, and presents to the genealogist an interesting field for research which ought to be thoroughly explored. It has been an influential family in New York, and many of its members have occupied prominent positions. Judge Nehemiah was a member of Congress. Among its living members are Dr. George W. Earll, of Skaneateles, and Dr. Isaac Balfour Earll, of Syracuse, sons of Hiram, son of Daniel; Thomas Earll, of Brooklyn; George David Earll, of New York city; Asa Earl, of Lafayette, Indiana, a descendant of Daniel's son Nehemiah; and William Earll, a dealer in agricultural implements in Chico, California, who is a son of Peter, son of David the brother of Daniel. George D. Earll, son of Elijah B., son of David, son of David, the brother of Daniel, was a lawyer in Watertown, N. Y., twenty-five years ago; and David Sprague Earll, son of Jonas, son of Daniel, and brother of Jonas, Jr., who had been a member of Congress, was living, a few years ago, in Syracuse.

Nehemiah Earll, uncle of Judge Nehemiah, removed to the Western States and had a family of fifteen children. One of his grandsons, Guy Chaffee Earl, of Oakland, California, in writing of him, says: "He spelled his name with two l's, Earll, but, tiring of this, dropped one l." All of his descendants probably followed his example.

4. At some time between the years 1720 and 1740 Thomas Earl came from England and settled in Burlington, New Jersey, or its vicinity. His son John had a large family, several of whom died young; but his son Gibtersharp (or Gibterthorp) died in 1850, at the age of 78 years; and another son, Samuel W., was still living, ten years ago, in Burlington. Gibtersharp left four sons and four daughters, all of whom, with the exception of the eldest son, John, were living in 1868. Thomas, one of the other sons, was a physician at Franklin Mills, Portage Co., Ohio, and William C., another, resided in Toledo, Ohio.

5. For the last two hundred years there has been a settlement of Earles on the Eastern shore of Maryland. To this branch belonged the late Judge Richard Tilghman Earle, of Neelwood, near Centreville, with whom, so long ago as 1840, I held some correspondence in regard to the genealogy of our families. In a letter dated October 8th of that year, he says: "The family record of my ancestry I have made up chiefly from a well attested manuscript of my grandfather, James Earle, who died in the year 1736. The author states that his grandfather and grandmother, James Earle and Rhody Earle, came to Maryland in 1683, and brought with them thirteen children, their eldest son, John Earle, being in the country before, in the command of a ship; that the commander was afterwards captured by pirates on the coast of Africa, and ended his life in slavery; that he descended from the second son, Michael Earle; and that his uncle Joseph Earle, settled in the same neighborhood with his father. No farther notice is taken of the thirteen children, neither in ascertaining the number of males and females, nor in stating what became of them. The manuscript is equally unfortunate in another important particular, in omitting to tell from what country the immigrants, James Earle, his wife Rhody Earle, and their thirteen children came when they took up their abode in Maryland."

Dr. John C. Earle, now of Easton, Md., is a son of Judge Richard Tilghman, and the widow of another son, James Tilghman, is living near Centreville. Two others, Richard Tilghman and Samuel Tilghman, are farmers residing upon old family homesteads; and a fifth, George, now deceased, was a lawyer and held offices both State and national.

6. In 1805 John Baylis Earle was a member of Congress from South Carolina. A letter from him to Pliny Earle, senior [355–1], in reply to a request for genealogical information in regard to his family, and dated at Washington on the 13th of January of the year aforesaid, is now before me. In it he says: "My grandfather, whose name was Samuel Earle, lived and died in the State of Virginia, in the neighborhood of Lord Fairfax. My father having married and removed to South Carolina before I was born, I had no opportunity to know much of my distant relatives. * * * My father had but one own brother, who was father to the Samuel Earle, late a member of Congress." He then proceeds to mention a trait in some of his relatives which has been exhibited in the descendants of Ralph of Rhode Island: "A number of the young men are remarkable for their mechanical ingenuity. None of them ever served an apprenticeship to any business, but they have learned trades without instruction, and done several kinds of work to great perfection, one of them having, without any assistance or many tools, made an elegant horseman's sword."

General Elias Earle and his cousin Baylis J. Earle, of Waldo, near Santa Fe Lake, Florida, are, according to a letter from the latter, in 1883, descendants of the above-mentioned John Baylis and of Elias Earle, his brother, who was also, as is stated in the letter, "in Congress from the northern district of South Carolina about 75 years ago." The letter also states that John Baylis is a family name, and was borne not only by the member of Congress, but also "by Judge Baylis John Earle, of South Carolina, and also by Gen. John Baylis Earle, who was, for twenty years, the Adjutant and Inspector General of South Carolina. Elias, Baylis and Samuel are family names in the southern branch."

is a member of the South Carolina branch. I believe it has been shown that Samuel Earle, the grandfather of John Baylis Earle, who was in Congress in 1805, was a son of the James and Rhody Earle who were the first American progenitors of the Maryland Earles.

7. According to the Records of Boxford, Mass., William Eills, of that town, m. Nov. 19, 1719, Sarah Curtis. They had five children, three of whom were sons. William, the eldest, and the only one, so far as known, who lived to have a family, m. August 23, 1744, Martha Booth. After the birth of three children in Boxford, they removed to Rindge, N. H., where, after the birth of three more, William died. Three of his children were sons: 1, John, m. in 1773, Rebecca Page; lived in Rindge and d. there in 1803. 2, Jacob, m. in 1769, Relief Bennett, and d. in 1794, in Boylston, Mass. 3, Stephen, m. in 1780, Mary Rice; lived several years in Shrewsbury, Mass., then removed to Gerry (now Phillipston), and was accidentally killed in Boston, June 7, 1825.

These three brothers changed their family name to Earls or Earl.

John and Rebecca (Page) Earl had nine children, but only one son, John, who m. in 1811, Rhoda Castle. They lived some years in Burlington, Vt., went thence to Essex, Essex Co., New York, and afterwards removed to Michigan.

Jacob and Relief (Bennett) Earl had five children, three of whom were sons: 1, Jacob, m. Polly Burgess, and lived in Hardwick, Mass., where he died in 1843. 2, Jonathan, who d. young. 3, William, m. Delia Maynard; lived in Springfield, Vt., and d. in 1855.

Stephen and Mary (Rice) Earl had four sons: 1, Henry, b. 1780; m. 1807, Mary Ryder, and d. Oct. 2, 1809, in Wellfleet, Mass. He was a teacher. 2, John, m. 1806, Sally G. Harding, and d. in Lowell, Mass., May 9, 1825. 3, Hezekiah, m. 1811, Mary (Harris) Popkin, and d. in Boston, Mass., March 30, 1857. He was the proprietor of the widely known Earl's Coffee House, from about 1806 to 1832, and Deputy City Marshal from 1832 to 1857. 4, Stephen, b. 1791; m. 1814, Nabby Stone, and d. in Princeton, Mass., April 13, 1825. They had two children, both of whom d. young.

John and Rhoda (Castle) Earl had but one son, John H., b. 1815; m. 1840, Lorinda Morseman. Issue, two children, one son, John W., b. in 1840. In 1844 the family were in Jackson Co., Michigan.

Jacob and Polly (Burgess) Earl had eleven children, eight of them sons, of whom only four were married; viz.: 1, Ira, b. 1801; m. Iris Butterfield; lived many years in Leicester, Mass., and d. there in 1881. 2, Benjamin P., b. 1814; m. 1845, Sarah Deans; had but one child, Ella, who m. 1871, Austin V. Dow, and d. 1872. 3, James P., b. 1817; went to Charleston, South Carolina, and m. Anna Brooklebank. They had four children, three of them sons: a, James P., now a dealer in boots and shoes in Charleston. b, Edward, b. 1853. c, William, b. 1855. 4, Ralph, b. 1819. He went to Charleston, S. C., where he m. in 1845, Amanda R. Mackie; returned to Hardwick, Mass., in 1853; was in the stove and iron-ware trade in Worcester, Mass., in 1855, and returned to Charleston, where he d. in 1860. They had six children, four of them sons: a, Elmer Ralph, b. 1848. b, Arthur C., b. 1850. c, Ira M., b. 1851. d, Ralph, b. 1856. The first three were born in Charleston, S. C., the fourth in Worcester, Mass. After Ralph's decease the family returned to Massachusetts, and lived in Springfield. The widow married again, but her husband has died, and she is now living with two of her children in Brooklyn, N. Y.

William and Delia (Maynard) Earl had twelve children, of whom five sons married: 1, Edward S., b. 1808; m. Hannah A. Wheeler; had three children, all daughters; lived many years in Springfield, Vt., but d. in 1879 in Waumatiza, Wis. 2, William M., b. 1811; m. 1st, Eliza Farrar, 2d, Augusta Pratt; was living in Springfield, Vt., in 1859, and afterward in Ludlow. They had four children, two of them sons, one of whom d. young. The other, Edward O., was b. May 16, 1844. 3, Samuel M., b. 1813; m. Mehitable Wilkins; had two children, both girls; was living in Springfield, Vt., in 1859. 4, Warren R., b. 1820; m. 1846, Louisa Hutchinson, of Nashua, N. H.; issue, four children, three of them boys, of whom one d. young. The others were: a, Alonzo B., b. 1851; last heard from in Stoddard, N. H. b, Alfred O., b. August 26, 1853; last heard from in Springfield, Vt. 5, Alonzo B., b. 1828; m. 1855, Marilla A. Lewis; issue, five children, of whom two were sons: a, Orville H., b. June 29, 1856, in Medford, Mass. b, George W., b. Feb. 22, 1862, in Goshen, N. H.

Henry and Mary (Ryder) Earl had issue: Henry, b. 1809; m. Mary Ann Harris, of Windsor, Vt., and had four children, two of them sons. One of these d. young. The other, William H., was b. 1841; m. 1872, Lizzie J. Deane, of Medford, Mass., and was living in that town in 1879.

Hezekiah and Mary (Harris–Popkin) Earl had six children, two or them sons, one of whom d. young. The other, Hezekiah, who is freight accountant of the Boston and Albany Railroad Co., was b. Aug. 15, 1817; m. 1847, Harriet N. Brooks. They live in Auburndale, Mass., and have two children: 1, Joseph S., b. July 26, 1850; m. Cora Bailey. 2, Harris B., b. Oct. 3, 1862.

Ira and Iris (Butterfield) Earl had three children, of whom the only son, John E. Earle, was b. Feb. 6, 1831; m. Sarah S. Caldwell, and lives in New Haven, Conn., where he is engaged in the business of American and foreign patents, and is an expert in patent causes. Their children were: 1, Edward C., b. 1857; d. 1882. 2, Joseph C., b. 1858. 3, Frederick C., b. 1862; m. 1886, Charlotte Isabel Lyon, and has one child, John Edwin, b. Oct. 2, 1887. 4, Harry P., b. 1865. 5, John W., b. 1869; d. 1870. 6, James P., b. 1870. 7, Leila E., b. 1875.

John E. and his family have added the final e to their surname.

Stephen Earl, of Gerry, adopted an orphan named Benjamin H. White, who, after Stephen's death, was adopted by his son Hezekiah. The boy's name was changed to Benjamin White Earl. He m. in 1829, Elizabeth Albin, in New York city. They lived in some of the middle States, and afterward in Ohio, where he d. at Steubenville, about 1860. Their children were: 1, William S., b. 1837. 2, Benjamin H., b. 1840. 3, Francis A., b. 1844. 4, John K., b. 1846. 5, Edward A., b. 1850. 6, James F., b. 1853.

8. Being in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in 1879, I met Mr. Porter W. Earl, then a resident, with his family, of that city. I was strongly impressed with his very striking family resemblance to the descendants of the fifth and sixth generations of Ralph Earle who were living in Leicester, Mass., and its vicinity from fifty to seventy years ago. This resemblance was so marked as to leave no doubt upon my mind that he is a descendant of Ralph. He stated that his father, Stephen H. Earl, whose mother was either a Hopkins or a Williams, removed from Newport, R. I., or its vicinity to Vermont and there, at the age of 33 years, married Sarah Porter. Their children were: 1, Sarah, who m. Christian Ingersoll. 2, William, d. in Hamburg, N. Y. 3, Porter W., b. in 1802, in Peru, N. Y. 4, Mary; and 5, Eliza.

The children of Porter [?] W. were: 1, Porter M., d. unmarried. 2, William, m. and lives in Colorado. 3, Harriet, m. and lives in Peoria, Ill. 4, Mary, m. —— Baxter, and lives in Cedar Rapids. 5, Ella, living unmarried with her father.

Mr. Earl further stated in regard to his father, Stephen H., that he was taken prisoner by the British at Newport in the Revolutionary war; and that he died at Hamburg, near Buffalo, N. Y., in 1838. Perhaps the true position of this family among the descendants of Ralph and Joan may hereafter be discovered. Porter [?] W. now resides in Peoria, Ill.

9. James S. Earle, the founder of the picture gallery in Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., was the son of Henry Earle, who removed from Winchester to London, Eng., and died in 1820. James came to America in 1815. His brother, John H., came in 1825 and also settled in Philadelphia.

COAT OF ARMS.

Several inquires have been received in relation to the coat of arms of the Earle family. As will be seen below, a no inconsiderable number of armorials have been granted to different members of the family in England. But in all my intercourse, either personal or by written correspondence, with the descendants of Ralph and Joan, I have found no one who wore or bore a coat of arms, and in only one instance have I heard of one in the possession of any family.

The late Edward W. Lawton, of Newport, R. I., a man of much general culture, who was born in 1786, and between whose ancestral relatives and the Earles there had been several intermarriages, sent to me, in 1858, the dates of birth, marriage, etc., of the children of John [199–5] and Dorcas (Barney) Earle, accompanied by the following statement:

"The transcript (of dates, etc.) was sent me by my benevolent Aunt Sarah [440–5], who gave away the bible, as she did every other article in the house that her needy friends would take, even the coat of arms of the Earles, which was set in a small black frame, with 10 by 12 glass. I remember the horses' heads only." He thought it must still be in the possession of some descendant of John and Dorcas.

The subjoined list of granted armorials in England is copied from Mr. Burke.

1. Earl. (Swallowfield Place, County of Berks.) Gules, three escallops, within a bordure engrailed, argent. Crest—A Lion's head, erased or, pierced with a broken dart proper.

2. Earl, or Erlley. The same arms. Crest—On the point of a tilting spear, proper, headed argent, a dolphin naiant of the first.

3. Earl. Gules on a chevron argent; three trefoils sable between as many escallops in chief and a dolphin in base, all within a double tressure engrailed of the second, the outer bordure or. Crest—A nag's head erased sable maned or.

4. Earle. (Topsfield, County of Essex, and Craglethorpe, County of Lincoln.) Gules three escallops within a bordure engrailed argent. Crest—A nag's head erased sable maned or.

5. Earle. (Boston, County of Lincoln.) Gules an amulet or, between three escallops argent within a bordure engrailed of the third.

6. Earle. (Lincolnshire; granted 1558.) Gules a fesse, between three sheldrakes argent. Crest—A Lion's head erased or, pierced through the head with a broken spear argent the point embrued gules.

7. Earle. Gules, on a fesse or, three magpies proper membered of the second.

8. Earle. Azure a fesse between two cotises or.

9. Earle. Paly of ten or and gules a mullett in chief argent. Crest—A Lion's gamb erect and erased, holding an arrow in bend sinister, point downwards, proper.

10. Earles (granted 1 August, 1660). Ermine on a cross gules five crowns or. Crest—A cross gules between two wings ermine.

11. Earles (granted 1 August, 1660). Ermine on a chief indented sable three eastern crowns or.

The coat of arms borne by the Earles of Maryland differs from any one of these, but has points of resemblance to several of them, and is most nearly like the first and the fourth. The special English branch of the family from which Ralph originated must, apparently, be discovered, before his descendants can rightfully claim either of the armorials here mentioned.

The names of more than four thousand of the descendants of Ralph and Joan Earle are mentioned in this collection, although those which are regularly numbered, in the body of the work, are, as indicated by the last number on page 439, only 3,978. In cases where a person named Earle, whether man or woman, had but one child, the name of that child is given in connection with that of its parent, and under the designating number of that parent; and the history of the family is not carried forward to the next generation. Hence there is no special number for the child. Examples of this kind may be seen in No. 1688–10, where Martha J. Earle married Charles E. Osgood, and in No. 1804–4, where Frank M. Earle married Anna Conlin. These exceptional cases are alone sufficient to swell the number of named descendants to a considerable excess over four thousand; and to these may be added the later received names printed near the end of the book, under the head of "Additions."

Ralph and Joan Earle had five children—two sons and three daughters. The two sons had eleven children; the three daughters, twenty-nine. The eleven, by family name, were Earles; the twenty-nine had several family names, corresponding, respectively, with the surnames of the husbands of the three daughters. The descendants of the twenty-nine who had other family names, have undoubtedly been far more numerous than the descendants of the eleven Earles. As in most other genealogies, there is, in this book, no attempt to trace the descendants of females named Earle, farther than their children. So far as our knowledge extends, the names, dates of birth, etc., of the children of every married woman whose maiden name was Earle, are here recorded; but the names of her grandchildren, and the descendants of later generations, are not, unless she married an Earle. Thus, for example, the names, so far as known, of the children of the three daughters of Ralph and Joan, are inserted; but those of the children of those children are not. There the descending lineage of those families stops; and the same rule is followed throughout the book. In the endeavor to maintain a rigid adherence to this rule, I have been obliged, and often with much regret, to omit more than a thousand names now in my possession.

It will be perceived that the orthography of the family name has differed, in England, as well as in America. To say nothing of the apparently original De Erlegh, and the later De Erle, the spelling has been, in that country, Erle, Earl, Earls and Earle, in different branches. The name is still found there under these four several forms; but it is believed that Earle is by far the most prevalent.

In the compilation of this book, the diversity of orthography has been the source of no little labor, not to say annoyance. It has been the endeavor, as stated in a note on page 18, to give the names of all living descendants, as they themselves, in each instance, would write it. But it is undoubtedly true that, in many instances, there has been a failure to accomplish that object. As an illustration of the difficulty in its accomplishment, as well as to show how the spelling of one's name is governed by either taste, whim or caprice, the following curious example may be adduced: In a public registry of one of the counties in Massachusetts, there is the record of a document relating to the ownership of certain real estate. The paper was signed by six brothers. If their signatures be correctly copied, the first three of them spelled their surname Earll; the next two, Earle; and the last one, Earl. The paper was signed more than a hundred years ago.

Perfect accuracy in the multitude of statistics of a genealogical work is impossible; but it is hoped that this contains few errors other than those which were apparently unavoidable. Of these, the compiler desires to receive corrections, which will be preserved for future use, should the time come in which, by other hands than his, the work may be continued, and its scope enlarged by the tracing of some branches not here fully developed.

ABBREVIATIONS.

The following abbreviations are used in this work:—b. for born; d. for died; dau. for daughter; gr. for grand; m. for married; unm. for unmarried.

For the names of children look under the numbers of their parents.

The italicized names in parenthesis, immediately following the name of a married descendant, where his personal and family record is given, show his direct pedigree back to the emigrant Ralph; and the small figures, attached to those names, indicate the generation to which each of those persons, respectively, belonged. For instance, in the case of [1638-2] George F. Earle, on page 328, the parenthetical names show that George's father was Halford, of the seventh generation; his grandfather, Frederick, of the sixth generation; his great-grandfather, George, of the fifth generation; and so on, to Ralph, of the first generation. By these italicized names it is very easy for any descendant to trace his direct ancestry.

The earliest trace of Ralph hitherto discovered, is in the records of Newport, R. I. His name is there found under date of "first of eighth month" (October), 1638, in a list with fifty-eight others, arranged as "A catalogue of such persons who, by the Generall consent of the company, were admitted to the Inhabytants of the Island now called Aqueedneck, having submitted themselves to the Government that is, or shall be, established according to the word of God therein."

INFORMATION RECENTLY DISCOVERED.

Extract from the Diary of Samuel Sewall, Vol. I, page 501, Massachusetts Historical Collections, Vol. 5, of the fifth series.

"1699, Sept. 15, Friday, Mr. Newton and I rode to Newpor see aged Joan Savage (now Earl) by the way. Her husband, Ralj Earl, was born 1606, and his wife was ten or eleven years old than he ; so she is esteemed to be one hundred and five years old."

Thomas Savage went early to Portsmouth, R. I., but soon retu ed to Boston, Mass. He was a son of William Savage, of Taunt Somerset Co., England, and was born in 1608 and died Feb. 14, 16 It is probable that Joan Savage was a relative of his, and that t Taunton records may furnish further information in regard to b her and her husband, Ralph Earle.

RALPH EARLE

AND HIS

DESCENDANTS.

FIRST GENERATION.

[1]. Ralph[1] Earle; m. Joan ——; and d. at Portsmouth, R. I., in 1678.

Of the place of birth, the residence previous to emigration from England, or the ancestry of Ralph, we have no positive history. There is a tradition among his descendants that he came from Exeter, in the year 1634, and this tradition is probably correct. There is little doubt that he was married in England, and that his wife came with him, but her maiden surname and the dates of her birth and death are unknown. Her Christian name is spelled in the old records in three different ways, viz.: Ione, Jone and Joan; we have adopted the last orthography as now the most common.

The earliest trace of Ralph hitherto discovered, is in the records of Newport, R. I. His name is there found under date of "first of eighth month" (October), 1638, in a list with fifty-eight others, arranged as "A catalogue of such persons who, by the Generall consent of the company, were admitted to the Inhabytants of the Island now called Aqueedneck, having submitted themselves to the Government that is, or shall be, established according to the word of God therein."

The following is extracted from the records of Portsmouth, R. I.:

"APRIL ye 30th, 1639.

We, whose names are under [written, doe acknowledge*] ourselves the legell subjects of [his majestie] King Charles, and in his name [doe hereby binde] ourzelves into a civill body politicke, unto his lawes according to matters of justice."

This declaration was signed by twenty-nine men, of whom Ralph Earle† was one. January 7, 1640, it was ordered at a town meeting that he and his co-partner, Mr. Wilbur, "shall serve the town with good sufficient stuff, viz: well sawn boards at eight shillings the hundred, and half inch boards at seven shillings, to be delivered at the pit by the waterside."

March 21, 1640, Ralph conveyed to William Baulstone "parcells of upland and meadow."

In the record of a town meeting held August 26, 1647, it is stated that he was "chosen to keep an Inn to sell beer and wine, and to entertain strangers"; and at another held June 2, 1649, he was "chosen Treasurer for this year next insuing, and also overseer of the poor."

At a similar meeting on the 29th of April, 1650, Ralph and five others were chosen "for the committee for the General Assembly at Newport in May next." On the 12th of November, 1650, it was "voated & granted that Ralph Erl's house wherein he now dwelleth be recorded & Inn, in ye room of ye former vote that he was an Innkeeper"; on the 19th of January, 1651, he and three others were chosen "to proportion every man's farm," &c., for the purpose of assessing a tax for the support of a poor man; and on the 3d of June, 1651, he was again elected town treasurer.

* A part of the record is torn off, and it has been supplied on the town's book by the words in brackets.

† This name in all the very earliest records is written with the final e, but the orthography soon begins to vary and runs into the several forms—Earl, Earll, Erl and Erle.

In minor branches of the family the two forms Earle and Earl have been continued to the present day; and in central New York there are many families whose descent from Ralph is indicated by circumstantial evidence, but has not been positively demonstrated, who now write their names Earll. In this compilation the orthography of living families is that which is used by them, wherever it is known, and it will be seen that it sometimes varies in individuals of the same family.

Under date of August 25, 1651, there is a record of an agreement of division of fence between Ralph Earle and John Tripp. A very old copy of the original document is now in the possession of the heirs of the late George Earle of Providence, R. I.; it is dated August 25, 1639.

On the 21st of May, 1651, Ralph conveyed a tenement and eight acres of land to Nicholas and Joan Harte; on the 24th of June, 1652, he sold to William Arnold of Providence, land formerly owned by Francis Weston's wife Margaret, near "Pawtuxet Falls"; on February 19, 1653, he quitclaimed to Thomas Lawton, and on December 13, 1653, he conveyed twenty acres to William Cadman.

In 1654, he and another man were chosen as a town's committee to "oversee the work of the Prison."

On the 5th of April, 1655, he conveyed to his son William eighteen acres of land on the northern extremity of the island, at Bristol Ferry. It is traditional that he owned the ferry, but this has not been confirmed by any discovered records.

May 5, 1655, the "Jurymen chosen for the Generall Court of Tryals to be held at Providence," were John Sandford, Ralph Earle and Francis Brayton. Ralph was again upon the grand jury in 1669.

May 25, 1655, he was appointed by the Court of Commissioners to keep a house of entertainment. A convenient sign was to be set out at the most "perspicuous" place, to give notice to strangers.

On November 24, 1656, he conveyed land to Daniel Grinnell, Ralph, Jr., signing the deed as witness; and on the 5th of January, 1658, he conveyed forty acres to Jeremiah Willis.

At a town meeting March 2, 1658, five men were chosen "to examine and audit Ralph Earll's accompts of what the towne is indebted unto him, and what they shall find the towne to be in his debt shall be payd to the sayd Earll by the towne Treasurer."

August 10, 1667, he joined a "troope of horse," which had been ordered to be raised, and signed, with eighteen others, a paper in which they "approve of the choyce of our Captaine (Peleg N. Sanford) and Lieftenant (John Almy) to the full." He was afterward captain of the troop.

June 7, 1671, in the General Assembly, Ralph "Earll" and eleven others, of Portsmouth, and a number of residents of Newport, were appointed as a special court, to sit on the 15th of the same month, to try "two Indians now imprisoned upon criminall charge."

Ralph claimed the lands of the Dutch House of Good Hope, now Hartford, Connecticut, and commenced a lawsuit therefor "against Richard Lord and James Richards of Hartford, possessors of the Dutch land, about 1667. Earl affirmed that he purchased the land of Underhill, in August, 1653, and paid him twenty pounds sterling for it; but Underhill protested against Earl's claim." "It is not improbable," continues the article from which we quote, "that there was some foundation for this claim. There are many papers upon the subject in the archives of Connecticut."

Ralph's will was as follows:

"The last will and testiment of Ralph Earle, of Portsmouth, on Rhoad Island, being in perfect memory, being sencible of man's mortalitie and for the avoiding of futur controversies amongst my Relations doe order and dispose of my Estate as followeth:—first I doe order, substitute and apointe Jone my wife my whole and sole Executrix to Receive and pay all whatsoever is due Either to or from mee and that which Remains of my Estate shall bee and Remaine in the hand and possession of my said wife during her naturall life and att her deceas to be disposed and divided in maner and forme following, namely, my will is that after and upon the decease of my said wife that all my land and housing, with the apurtinenc thereto belonging, shall be and Remaine to my Eldest sonn, Ralph Earle, and to Ralph Earle, the sonn of my sonn William Earle, to be Equally divided into three parts, my sonn Ralph to have two parts thereof and my said Grandsonn one, to be to them, there heirs and Asigns a possesion and Estate forever: and further my will is that all my moveable Estate shall, at the decease of my said wife, be Equally divided into five parts, and that my sonn Ralph Earle shall have two parts thereof, he paying, or causing to be paid, the sum of one shilling to my son William Earle, as his portion of my Estate, and the other three parts thereof I doe give and bequeath to my three daughters, that is to say, Mary the wife of William Cory, Martha the wife of William Wood, and Sarah, widow to the late deceased Thomas Cornell, to Each of them an Equall share: and for the dividing and disposing wherof, as an overseer, I doe order and apoint my friend and neighbor John Tripp the Elder to take care to see this my will performed as abovesaid; and that this is my will and testament, to be performed to all true intents, witness my hand and seal, this nienteenth day of november, in the year one Thousand six hundred Seventy and Three."

"Witnes Thomas Havens."

The children of Ralph and Joan Earle were:

2–1. RALPH EARLE; m. Dorcas Sprague.
3–2. WILLIAM EARLE; m. 1st, Mary Walker; 2d, Prudence ——.

4–3. MARY EARLE; m. William Cory.
5–4. MARTHA EARLE; m. William Wood.
6–5. SARAH EARLE; m. Thomas Cornell.

SECOND GENERATION.

[2–1]. Ralph[2] Earle (Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Joan Earle; m. before Oct. 26, 1659, Dorcas, dau. of Francis and Lydia Sprague, of Duxbury, Mass.; and d. probably in 1716, as letters of administration were granted to his son John on the 6th of January, 1717.

The first intimation of this Ralph is in the record of a town meeting in Portsmouth, January 19, 1651, where his father is mentioned as Ralph Earle, Senior. The next is his signature as witness to one of his father's deeds of real estate, November 24, 1656. He was received a freeman of the town May 11, 1658; and at the same meeting it was "Ordered that Ralph Earll Jun[r] shall be payd Eleven Shillings after the Rate of Eight white peages (beads) per peny, by the Treasurer."

October 26, 1659, Francis Sprague, "of Duxborough," conveyed to his "son-in-Law, Ralph Earl, of Road Island," one-half share of land at "Coaksett and Acushena, in the Jurisdiction of Plymouth." Sprague had his title to the land from the Indians Wosamequin and "Wamsitta."

It is probable that Ralph immediately removed from Portsmouth and settled upon this land, as at the time of all known subsequent allusions to him he was in Dartmouth, within which the land was situated. He was one of the persons who received the confirmatory deed of the town, and it is known that he was there in 1663.

May 10, 1684, John Eyanoe conveyed to Ralph Earle, a neck or island, made at high water, in Yarmouth, in consideration of a "certain parcel of Land sittuate under y[e] goverment of new york in America, upon cutAhonkko, viz. one neck and one island in A fresh pond upon s[d] cutAhonkko, and Twenty acres of Land in Dartmouth, payd by Ralph Earl."

June 13, 1688, "Ralph Earl of Dartmouth," "in consideration of natural love and affection," conveyed to his son Ralph, "one half of the westermost island, called Elizabeth Island, to be his after my decease."

October 20, 1689, "in consideration of natural affection," he conveyed to his son William one hundred acres of land in Dartmouth.

June 10, 1692, he says that "of my own moote [and] motion, for divors good causes and good considerations moveing mee thereunto, beside my trew Love and naturall Affections that I bare unto this my youngest son Joseph Earle, and for his advancement for time to come," and "with the consent of Dorcas, my wife," he conveyed to the said Joseph two hundred acres of land in Dartmouth. This was "bounded upon Ponaganset River, So up into the woods."

July 24, 1693, he conveyed to his son William, "in consideration of natural love and affection, one quarter part of the Island called by the Indians Pocatahunka, being the westermost Island."

He was a large land holder, and many other of his conveyances are upon record. Of these grants, the only consideration for the value of the land appears to have been his "natural love and affection" in the following instances, namely: 250 acres to his son John; after his death 100 acres to his grandson John, 100 acres to his grandson Daniel, 50 acres to his grandson Benjamin, and "A small Island, or Tract of Land," to William Ingraham.

The following paragraph is taken from John W. Barber's Historical Collections of Massachusetts:

"During Philip's War a great part of this town [Dartmouth] was laid desolate and many of the inhabitants killed. The most of the Plymouth forces were ordered thither. In coming to Russel's garrison, at Ponaganset, or Aponaganset, in this town, they met with a number of the enemy that had surrendered themselves prisoners, on terms promised by Capt. Eels, of the garrison, and Ralph Earle, who persuaded them to come in, by a friendly Indian whom he employed. It is to be regretted, however, that notwithstanding the promises made by the above persons to the Indians, they were, by the superior authorities, carried away to Plymouth, 'then sold and transported out of the country, being about eight score persons.'"

The children of Ralph and Dorcas (Sprague) Earle were:

7–1. JOHN EARLE; m. Mary Wilcox.
8–2. RALPH EARLE; m. Dorcas Dillingham.
9–3. WILLIAM EARLE; m. Hephzibah Butts.
10–4. JOSEPH EARLE; m. Elizabeth Slocum.

[3–2]. William[2] Earle (Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Joan Earle; m. 1st, Mary, dau. of John and Katharine Walker, of Portsmouth, R. I., issue, three children; 2d, Prudence —— (d. Jan. 18, 1718); and d. Jan. 15, 1715.

The first known record of William is under date of April 2, 1654, when he and his wife Mary sold to James Sands their interest in fourteen acres that came by right of the late widow Walker; the land having come by marriage of Mary Walker (daughter of the widow) to William Earle.

In 1658, on the 11th of May, he was "Received a freeman" of Portsmouth; on the 18th of the same month "Att the Generall court of Commissioners held for the Collony, at Warwicke," he was admitted as a freeman of the colony; and on the 8th of June, he and two others were "chosen Jurymen to attend the Generel court of Tryels, at Newport."

At a town meeting held May 1, 1665, it was ordered that William Earle and William Correy (Cory) should have "one acker of land on the hill cauled Briges hill, or some other conveniant place in this townes Comons, and a quarter of an acker of land lying aganst ye towne pond over against William Earle's new dwelinge house, and these two pearcells of land they are to have and to enjoy to them and theres, so long as they maintain a wind mill in this towne for the towns use, Provided that if they maintain not the said mill then the said pearcells of land is to be returned and laid downe to the townes use and dispose." In 1668, the wind mill had been erected, and the town, at the request of said Earle and Cory, annulled the above order, and exchanged two acres of ground near the mill for two acres belonging to the said parties. In 1684, the site of the mill is mentioned as "Windmill hill," and in 1685, the grounds were re-exchanged, the town and the parties taking their former property respectively.

"The Eare marke of William Earl's cattell is a hapeny under the side of ye further Eare and a Slit on the Nere Eare, of 12 yeares standing, and Entred upon Record by me, Richard Bulgar, towne Clarke, December, ye 5th, 1667."

William removed to Dartmouth about the year 1670, and stayed several years, his interest there being large. He owned more than two thousand acres from his claims in the original division of the land. Copies of many conveyances both to and from him are upon record. In one of the latter, dated June 26, 1680, in consideration of "naturall Love and affection," he conveyed to his son Ralph and his wife Mary, "of Dartmouth," a "parcel of Land Scituate Lying and being in the Township of Freetown, in the county of Bristoll aforesaid, on the Eastward side of Tanton River, containing half a share, that is to say, half that whole share Adjoyning to the Fall River, two thirds whereof I do give to my said son Ralph Earll his heirs and Assigns forever; and the other Third thereof I do give to my said Daughter in Law Mary Earll her heirs and Assigns forever." This deed was executed in Portsmouth, and the land conveyed is now the site of the central and earliest settled part of the city of Fall River.

On the 6th of May, 1691, the "General Assembly for their Majesties Collony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, in New England, in Portsmouth on said Rhode Island, for the Election of General Officers for the said Collony," was held "at the house of William Earle, it being removed from Newport by reason of the distemper." It was "adjourned until the 23d day of June, and then to meet again at the house of William Earle, in Portsmouth, except the Governor sees cause to meet sooner, if urgent occasion should present."

In 1692, he was on the "grand Inquest at Newport"; and on the 6th of October he conveyed to his "welbeloved son Thomas Earll, of the Town of Dartmouth, * * * one full quarter of a share of upland" in Dartmouth.

He was a deputy from Portsmouth to the General Assemblies held at Providence, October 25, 1704, and at Newport, May 1, 1706, and July 3, 1706.

In his will, executed Nov. 13, 1713, he gave to his son William, a brass milk pan, and a like gift to his sons Thomas, Ralph and John, and his daughters Mary Borden, Mary Hix and Prudence Durfee, and to the last a negro girl, "Kate," also, to his son John, all the rest of the estate, real and personal, he paying legacies as follows: to grandson Caleb Earle, forty acres, or £40, at the age of twenty-one. To granddaughter Joan Earle, daughter of Caleb, £10, at twenty years of age. His son John was to allow his mother comfortable and sufficient maintenance.

The children of William Earle were:

11–1. MARY EARLE, b. 1655; m. John Borden.
12–2. WILLIAM EARLE; m. Elizabeth ——.
13–3. RALPH EARLE, b. 1660; m. Mary Hicks.
14–4. THOMAS EARLE; m. Mary Taber.
15–5. CALEB EARLE; m. Mary ——.
16–6. JOHN EARLE; m. Mary Wait.
17–7. PRUDENCE EARLE; m. Benjamin Durfee.

[4–3]. Mary[2] Earle (Ralph[1]), dau. of Ralph and Joan Earle; m. 1st, William Cory (d. 1682); and 2d, Joseph, son of Henry and Mary Timberlake. They lived in Portsmouth, R. I., where she d. Mar. 22, 1718.

The children of Mary Earle were:

18– 1. JOHN CORY; m. Elizabeth —— (d. after 1713); and d. 1712.
19– 2. WILLIAM CORY; m. Martha (d. 1704), dau. of John and Mary (Borden) Cook; and d. 1704.

46–8. Joseph Lake, b. June 15, 1690.

THIRD GENERATION.

[7–1]. John[3] Earle (Ralph,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Dorcas (Sprague) Earle; m. Mary (d. 1735), dau. of Daniel and Elizabeth (Cook) Wilcox; and d. in 1728.

John had taken the oath of fidelity, or Freeman's oath, in Dartmouth before March 24, 1686, but he afterwards removed to Tiverton. Before this removal and in October, 1686, John Sprague, son of John and grandson of Francis Sprague, and Lydia, his wife, conveyed to him all right, or claim of inheritance, in "one half of a purchase of Land Lying In ye township of Dartmouth, In ye county of Bristoll, where my Uncle Ralf Earl now lives." This was the land which Francis Sprague gave to his son-in-law, Ralph Earle [2–1].

In his will, which was executed February 12, 1719, he mentions his wife Mary; sons John, Daniel and Benjamin; and daughters Mary, Rebecca and Elizabeth. The inventory was £251. 6s. 1d.

The children of John and Mary (Wilcox) Earle were:

47–1. John Earle, b. Aug. 7, 1687.
48–2. Daniel Earle, b. Oct. 8, 1688; m. Grace Wicks, 1716.

49–3. Benjamin Earle, b. May 25, 1691; m. Rebecca Westgate.
50–4. Mary Earle, b. June 1, 1693; living, unmarried, in 1769.
51–5. Rebecca Earle, b. Dec. 17, 1695.
52–6. Elizabeth Earle, b. Sept. 6, 1699; m. 1st, George Westgate; 2d, Capt. John Adams, of Warren, R. I.

[8–2]. Ralph[3] Earle, Jr. (Ralph,[2] Ralph[1]), of Dartmouth, son of Ralph and Dorcas (Sprague) Earle, was b. 1660; m. 1692, Dorcas, dau. of Henry Dillingham; and d. in 1718. Dorcas died on "the 23[d] of the month called January, 1742, in the eightieth year of her age."

Ralph had taken the oath of fidelity, or freeman's oath, before March 24, 1686.

In 1693 he conveyed to his brother William, then in Dartmouth, "one half part of all and Singular my Island, as my father Ralph Earle hath given it to mee, which said Island is called Elizabeth Island." He had lived at one period on this island.

Ralph's will, executed April 2, 1718, and entered for probate May 8, 1718, mentions his wife Dorcas, his brother Joseph, his daughters Deborah, Hannah and Meribah, and his son Barnabas, to each of whom he left a legacy. The inventory was £1,862. 5s. 5d., and his wife Dorcas was executrix.

The children of Ralph and Dorcas (Dillingham) Earle were:

53–1. Deborah Earle, b. Sept. 2, 1693; m. Adam Hunt.
54–2. Barnabas Earle, b. Feb. 3, 1698; m. 1759, widow Parnel Chase. No issue.
55–3. Hannah Earle, b. Dec. 21, 1701; m. Aug. 27, 1719, William Brown.
56–4. Meribah Earle, b. Jan. 29, 1703.

Barnabas was on the petit jury in 1725; constable in 1741; "tything-man" in 1766. At the town meeting of August 9, 1762, he was chosen Moderator. It appears that he had a liberal estate for the times and place in which he lived. He received, by bequest, his father's homestead and various other lands. He also had an interest in the common lands of Dartmouth, and his name, among others, is signed to requests for calls of meetings of the "Proprietors and Purchasers," in several years from 1743 to 1773.

From his will, executed March 2, 1770, and entered for probate June 16, 1778, we make the following extract:

"Item I Give and Bequeath Unto my true and Loving Wife Pernal Earl: all my Indoors Moveable Estate also: my Sidesaddle and one third part of my Liveing Stock of Cattle Sheep horses and Swine I als° Give Her my Gould Sleave Buttens and my Silver Shoe Buckell all wich I Give to Her and to Her Heirs and Assigns for Ever. I also Give Her the Use and Improvement of my Now Dwelling House and ye yard round s^d House and orchard adjoyning s^d yard Dureing Her Natural Life. I also Give to my s^d Wife the Keeping of One Rideing horse & ye Keeping of one Cow to be kept weell or with Sufficient Hay and grass on my Homesed farm Dureing her Natural Life I also Give Her twelve Pound Lawfull mony to be paid Her yearly and Every Year after my Desease Dureing Her Natural life I also Give Her ten Bushels of Good Indian Coarn and ten Pounds of Good Marchantable Sheeps Woll yearly and Every year During Her Natural Life also Seven Coard of Wood yearly and Every year as above s^d she cuting & carting the same. All Which I Give to my Said Wife Parnel Earl In Lew of Her thirds or Right Dowry in my Esate."

[9–3]. William[3] Earle (Ralph,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Dorcas (Sprague) Earle; m. Dec. 26, 1695, Hephzibah (b. 1675), dau. of Thomas and Elizabeth Butts.

"I William Earle, son of Ralph Earle, of Dartmouth," in consideration of sixty-five pounds sterling, convey to Peleg Slocum, "one quarter part of the westermost Island called Elizabeth Island, alias Cotohunko, containing, by estimation, one hundred and twelve acres." August 29, 1693.

On the same day he conveyed to the said Slocum the use of one-eighth part of the same island during the life of his father, Ralph.

February 3, 1696, in consideration of thirty pounds sterling, he conveyed to Robert Havens one hundred acres of land in Dartmouth.

He was chosen constable in 1695, and again March 30, 1696.

The children of William and Hephzibah (Butts) Earle were:

57–1. Sarah Earle, b. Dec. 18, 1696; m. Thomas Manchester, of Tiverton, R. I., July 28, 1720.
58–2. Anna Earle, b. March 10, 1700; m. William King, of E. Greenwich, R. I., Feb. 1, 1722.
59–3. Joseph Earle, b. Feb. 9, 1702.
60–4. Thomas Earle, b. Jan. 17, 1704.

61–5. NATHANIEL EARLE, b. Jan. 28, 1705.
62–6. DAMARIS EARLE, b. Jan. 18, 1707.
63–7. JONATHAN EARLE, b. June 7, 1712.

These births are recorded in Little Compton, R. I.

No further history of the family is found: they probably emigrated from New England.

[10–4]. Joseph[3] Earle (Ralph,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Dorcas (Sprague) Earle, of Dartmouth, Mass.; m. Elizabeth (b. April 8, 1671), dau. of Giles and Anne (Lawton) Slocum, of Portsmouth, R. I.; and d. in 1756.

His father having given him two hundred acres of land in Dartmouth, he lived many years in that town, but removed to Portsmouth, R. I., before May 1, 1730. In the former town he was chosen juryman "for trials" in 1696, 1699 and 1700, and was on the grand jury in 1719. He was constable in 1702, and fence-viewer in 1724.

"The Ear mark of Joseph Earl, his Cattel, is a croop on the right Ear and a slit in the left. Recorded [Dartmouth] May the 2th day, 1724."

On the 1st of May, 1730, he relinquished his claim in the burying-ground at Portsmouth, and on the same day, in consideration, as he says, of "paternal love, good will and affection, which I have and do bear unto my loving son-in-law, James Kirby, of Newport," he deeded to said Kirby a house and several parcels of land.

The children of Joseph and Elizabeth (Slocum) Earle were:

64–1. ANN EARLE, b. Jan. 28, 1704; m. James Kirby.
65–2. DORCAS EARLE, b. April 10, 1705; m. Wm. Tilley.
66–3. JOSEPH EARLE, b. Dec. 31, 1708; d. Aug. 30, 1728.

[11–1]. Mary[3] Earle (William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of William and Mary (Walker) Earle, was b. in 1655, in Portsmouth, R. I.; m. Dec. 25, 1670, John (b. Sept., 1640; d. June 4, 1716), son of Richard and Joan Borden; lived in Portsmouth, and d. in June, 1734.

Their children were:

67–1. RICHARD BORDEN, b. Oct. 25, 1671.

68–2. JOHN BORDEN, b. 1675.
69–3. AMEY BORDEN, b. May 30, 1678; m. Benjamin Chase, of Tiverton, R. I.
70–4. JOSEPH BORDEN, b. Dec. 3, 1680.
71–5. THOMAS BORDEN, b. Dec. 13, 1682; m. April 18, 1717, Catharine (b. Feb. 23, 1689), dau. of John and Alice (Teddeman) Hull, of Jamestown, R. I.
72–6. HOPE BORDEN, b. March 3, 1685.
73–7. MARY BORDEN.
74–8. WILLIAM BORDEN, b. Aug. 15, 1689; m. July 7, 1715, Alice (b. Oct. 22, 1692), dau. of John and Alice (Teddeman) Hull, of Jamestown; one son, William.
75–9. BENJAMIN BORDEN.

[12–2]. William[3] Earl (William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Mary (Walker) Earle, was b. in Portsmouth, R. I.; m. Elizabeth ——, and settled in Dartmouth, Mass., where he was chosen juryman in 1694, and constable in 1695 and 1696. On the 5th of July, 1695, his father, who had lived in Dartmouth for some years, but had returned to Portsmouth, conveyed to him, in consideration of "love and affection," the homestead from which he had removed in the former town.

It appears that William was engaged in a small way in the shipping business, owning, in company with another man, a sloop with which he carried on a coasting trade between the ports of southern New England, New York and New Jersey.

In December, 1697, he removed to Springfield, N. J.; bought a farm there and passed the rest of his life upon it. The exact date of his death is not known; but his will is dated Sept. 23, 1732, and was proven May 10, 1733. In it after small legacies of money and furniture to his apparently only surviving daughters, Mary Borden and Martha Shinn, he gave the whole of the remainder of his estate, both real and personal, to his son William.

William was a member of the Society of Friends. His descendants followed his example in their religious relations and many of them still remain in membership with that society.

William's name upon the records is written without the final e; and as all of his descendants, so far as appears, have adopted that orthography, we here conform to their custom in that respect.

The children of William and Elizabeth Earl were:

76–1. MARY EARL; m. Jonathan Borden.
77–2. MARTHA EARL; m. Thomas Shinn (b. Nov. 6, 1693); and had one son, Earl Shinn.
78–3. —— EARL; m. John Webb.
79–4. WILLIAM EARL; m. Mrs. Mary Sharpe.
80–5. THOMAS EARL; m. Mary Crispin.

[13–3]. Ralph[3] Earle (William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Mary (Walker) Earle, was b. in 1660; m. Mary (Carr) Hicks, widow of John Hicks, and dau. of Robert Carr, of Newport, R. I.; and d. in 1757, at Leicester, Mass. His wife d. in the same year. Both were interred in the Friends' burial-ground, at Leicester, where are the graves of members of no less than six generations of their descendants.

The earliest known record of Ralph is, that he had taken the freeman's oath in Dartmouth prior to March 24, 1686. In 1688, his father gave to him and his wife the land "adjoyning the Fall River" at Pocasset, in Freetown. His removal to and occupancy of this land must have occurred soon afterward. He lived there between twenty-five and thirty years, the site of his house being on what is now Bedford street, about ten rods northeast of the northeast corner of the market which was standing in 1860. The house had a gambrel roof, and was destroyed about fifty years ago.

"The yaer mark of Ralph Earll's Creatures is a half penie on the hinder part of the right yaer and a Crop on the Left and his brandmark RE. Enterd the 14: of february 169⅔ by Sam[ll] Gardner Selectman."

He was surveyor of highways in 1690, '92 and '96, constable in 1699, and grand juryman in 1700 and 1715.

An old letter addressed to him in 1715, gives him the military title Ensign. In that year he conveyed to his son John eight acres of land, five of which was at Bristol Ferry, and came by gift from his grandfather Ralph.

In 1716, he went through Providence, R. I., into the interior of Massachusetts as far as Leicester. On the way, at Grafton, Mass., he hired an Indian, named Moses Printer, as a guide. Upon a portion of their route there was no path, and they marked trees as guides on their return. In the course of the next following year, 1717, he removed with a part of his family to Leicester, and purchased two tracts or lots of land of the original Proprietors of that town. The two tracts contained about 550 acres. One of them included the Mulberry Grove (now George and Billings Mann's) and some of the adjoining farms, and the other was on the west side of Asnebumskit hill, in what is now Paxton. Its westerly boundary appears to have been the road leading northerly from the Penniman place, one mile east of Paxton centre.

His dwelling house was about one and one-half miles north-easterly from the central village of Leicester, on Mulberry street, and very near the site of the present residence of Benjamin Wilson. It was a gambrel-roofed building of but one story, and was taken down in the year 1846.

At a town meeting March 5, 1721, it was "Voated that Ralph Earl" should have a certain "pew spot" in the meeting-house, he paying the town twenty shillings.

Within the next succeeding twelve years a meeting of the Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers, was organized in the town. Ralph joined it, and in 1732, he, his sons William and Robert and four other men, asked to be released from paying "any part of the Tax for the Seport of the minister or ministers established by the Laws of this province," alleging that they were Quakers, with a conscientious scruple against such payment, and laying claim to "the Privileges granted" to the people so-called. A meeting-house was erected upon a lot taken from the farms of Ralph and his neighbor and fellow-Quaker, Nathaniel Potter, both of whose bodies now repose within a few feet of its site.

Ralph's interest in the Society was such that he went to Philadelphia to visit William Penn. Penn was at that time building a house at Pennsburg, and it is said that he told Ralph that he would put the initials of his name upon the chimney.

At a town meeting March 22, 1736, "Voted to alow Mr. Ralph Earl four shillings to meet worcester men to preambulate ye line between worcester & lester."

It has been said that Ralph once owned Mount Hope, R. I., but no deed of it can be found upon record.

Ralph's will was executed on the 25th of May, 1750. Among the bequests to his wife is his "negro boy Sharp"; and he directs that if the negro be faithful and well-behaved, he shall have his freedom at her decease. If he be not faithful, he may be sold. But before Ralph died he manumitted the slave, and on the 6th of April, 1756, gave him thirty acres of land on the southern declivity of Asnebumskit. In the deed of conveyance he says "In consideration of Love, good will and faithful service to me performed by my negro servant Sharp" he makes this gift. It appears that Sharp afterwards assumed the name Freeborn as a surname. Ralph's deed is recorded in the Worcester Registry, Book 38, p. 285.*

81– 1. WILLIAM EARLE, b. Nov. 12, 1690; m. Annah Howard.
82– 2. JOHN EARLE, b. April 24, 1692; m. widow Sarah Borden.
83– 3. MARY EARLE, b. Oct. 24, 1693; m. —— Sheffield.
84– 4. ELIZABETH EARLE, b. Dec. 24, 1696; m. Robert Lawton.
85– 5. SARAH EARLE, b. Jan. 18, 1698; m. Stephen Manchester.
86– 6. MARTHA EARLE, b. Dec. 21, 1700.
87– 7. PATIENCE EARLE, b. Nov. 24, 1702; m. Benjamin Richardson.
88– 8. RALPH EARLE, b. March 14, 1704.
89– 9. ROBERT EARLE, b. March 2, 1706; m. 1st, Mary Newhall; 2d, Hepzibah Johnson.
90–10. MERCY EARLE, b. March 13, 1708; m. Jotham Rice.
91–11. BENJAMIN EARLE, b. March 14, 1711; m. 1st, Abigail Newhall; 2d, widow Deborah (Buffum) Slade.

[14–4]. Thomas[3] Earle (William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Mary (Walker) Earle; m. before Nov., 1693, Mary (b. 1670; d. 1759), dau. of Philip and Mary Taber, of Dartmouth, Mass.; and d. April 28, 1727.

In 1692, when his father gave him land in Dartmouth, he went there to live; in 1696, conveyed his land to John Shaw; lived a short time in Portsmouth; bought the same year of John Shaw 40 acres in Swanzey,† to which he removed and added more to it; in 1708, sold off between one and two acres for a Friends' meeting-house; in

* On the chart of "Ralph Earle and his Descendants" it is stated that he held two slaves. This mistake was caused by the differences in the spelling of Sharp's name in the records. † In the early records the spelling of the name of this town is Swansea, but in this work we have adopted the modern spelling—Swanzey.

1716, conveyed for love and good will, one-half his farm to his son Oliver, and in 1721, sold the other half to him for £1,100. He had then returned to Portsmouth. He died at his homestead in Warwick, R. I.

His will was executed in Warwick, April 27, 1727, and his wife Mary was executrix. Inventory, £669. 19s. 1d.

The children of Thomas and Mary (Taber) Earle were:

92–1. WILLIAM EARLE; m. 1st, Mehitable Brayton; 2d, widow Abigail Lawton.
93–2. THOMAS EARLE.
94–3. MARY EARLE; m. Jan. 31, 1711, Elisha, son of Daniel Baker, of Yarmouth, Mass.
95–4. OLIVER EARLE; m. Rebecca Sherman; d. 1766.
96–5. SARAH EARLE.
97–6. LYDIA EARLE.
98–7. REBECCA EARLE.

[15–5]. Caleb[3] Earle (William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Mary (Walker) Earle; m. Mary ——, who, after his death, m. Joseph Hicks.

Their children were:

99–1. CALEB EARLE.
100–2. JOAN EARLE.

[16–6]. John[3] Earle (William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Prudence Earle; m. Feb. 27, 1700, Mary (d. after 1759), dau. of Thomas and Sarah (Cook) Wait, of Tiverton, R. I., and d. Aug. 12, 1759. They were married by Joseph Church, Esq.

Richard Sherman, for thirty years Town Clerk of Portsmouth, says (1858) that "in 1714, John Earl's dwelling house stood a few rods south of the site of the hotel erected a few years ago at Bristol ferry."

It appears by the records of Portsmouth, that John acted upon coroner's juries in 1697, 1705 and 1712.

In 1714, the town of Portsmouth granted to him, in consideration of twenty-four shillings, twelve acres of the common lands.

November 15, 1715, "John Earll," of Portsmouth, in consideration of £100, conveyed to his "cousin* (nephew)† John Earll Jr.‡ (2d) of Portsmouth," three acres of land, with a dwelling house, in Portsmouth. This land was near Bristol ferry, and adjoined lands belonging to each party, respectively.

February 13, 1722, in consideration of £60, he conveyed to Shadrach Keese six acres of land on Hog Island, in Portsmouth.

His will was executed in 1759.

The children of John and Mary (Wait) Earle were:

101–1. PRUDENCE EARLE, b. Nov. 18, 1701.
102–2. MARY EARLE, b. Feb. 19, 1703; m. Job Durfee.
103–3. OLIVER EARLE, b. Feb. 26, 1706; m. Ruth Hall.
104–4. MARTHA EARLE, b. Sept. 29, 1708; m. Stephen Brownell.
105–5. WILLIAM EARLE, b. March 28, 1710; m. Mary Lawton.
106–6. JOHN EARLE, b. Nov. 10, 1717; m. 1st, Elizabeth Hall; 2d, Tabitha Hall; 3d, widow Deborah Brownell.

[17–7]. Prudence[3] Earle (William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of William and Prudence Earle, b. in 1681 in Portsmouth, R. I.; m. Benjamin (b. 1680; d. Jan. 6, 1754), son of Thomas and Deliverance (Tripp) Durfee; lived in Tiverton and Newport, R. I.; and d. March 12, 1733, in Westport, Mass.

Their children were:

107–1. JAMES DURFEE, b. Aug. 28, 1701.
108–2. ANN DURFEE, b. Jan. 11, 1703.
109–3. POPE DURFEE, b. Jan. 7, 1705.
110–4. WILLIAM DURFEE, b. Dec. 5, 1707.
111–5. BENJAMIN DURFEE, b. Jan. 5, 1709.
112–6. MARY DURFEE, b. Jan. 30, 1711.
113–7. SUSANNAH DURFEE, b. Jan. 28, 1713.
114–8. MARTHA DURFEE, b. July 15, 1719.
115–9. THOMAS DURFEE, b. Nov. 5, 1721.

"febuary ye 11th 1724^5 James Kerba and Ann Earl entered into ye marriage Covenant be me Thomas Terrah."—[Dartmouth Records.

Their child was:

135–1. JOSEPH KIRBY.

[65–2]. Dorcas[4] Earle (Joseph,[3] Ralph,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Joseph and Elizabeth (Slocum) Earle, of Portsmouth, R. I., b. April 10, 1705; m. before 1738, William Tilley.

Their children were:

136–1. WILLIAM TILLEY, b. 1738.
137–2. JAMES TILLEY.

[79–4]. William[4] Earl (William,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Elizabeth Earle, b. in Springfield, N. J.; m. in 1739, Mary, widow of —— Sharp; and lived on the farm devised to him by his father.

William's will is dated June 9, 1740. Letters of administration were granted to his wife, June 11, 1759.

Their child was:

138-1. ELIZABETH EARL.

[80-5]. Thomas[4] Earl (William,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Elizabeth Earl, b. in Springfield, N. J.; m. Sept. 6, 1727, Mary (b. May 12, 1705), dau. of Silas and Mrs. Mary (Stockton) Shinn Crispin; and d. in 1778.

After his brother William's decease he lived on his father's homestead and devised it to his son Thomas. In his will he says "I am creditably Enformed that I have inherited a large Estate in Rhode Island, By the Death of my Grand Father William Earl and I advise my sons Thomas and Tanton to go in pursuit of it." No such bequest was made in his grandfather's will.

The children of Thomas and Mary (Crispin) Earl were:

139-1. TANTON EARL, b. March 9, 1731; m. Mary Haines.
140-2. THOMAS EARL; m. 1st, Rebecca Newbold; 2d, Leah Tucker.
141-3. WILLIAM EARL; m. Mercy ——; and d. before his father.
142-4. JOHN EARL; d. before his father.

[81-1]. William[4] Earle (Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Mary (Hicks) Earle, b. Nov. 12, 1690, in Dartmouth or Freetown, Mass.; m. Anna Howard, of Tiverton, R. I.; and d. in 1769.

He removed to Leicester, Mass., where he bought quite a large tract of land of the original proprietors of the town. This was on both sides of what is now Mulberry street, and Marshall street was its northern boundary. His house was about fifty rods south of the junction of those streets, a little north of the present dwelling of John P. Stevens.

"Janowari 3, 1722, William [Earl] Entred his Mark [for cattle] the Right Ear cut off."—[Leicester Town Records.

As already mentioned he was one of the earliest members of the Society of Friends in Leicester, and at a town meeting, held March 2, 1730, it was, at his request, "Voted to abate Willm Earl So much of his Rate (tax) as proportionally appears To be his part to the minister Rate." Twenty-eight years later, in 1758, and after the decease of his father, the adult male members of the Society were William Earle, Nathaniel Potter, Dudley Wade Swan, Steward Southgate, Robert and Benjamin Earle, Benjamin Wheaton, William Earle, Jr., John Potter and Nathaniel Potter, Jr.

January 12, 1737, at a town meeting it was "Voted to keep ye school at Mr. William Earl's, one month, from this time."

March 23, 1737, he conveyed by deed to his son William, the southerly half (87 acres) of his farm, that portion which bounds the Mulberry Grove farm, now George and Billings Mann's, on the north. He built a grist-mill near the N. E. corner of his farm, on what was then called Hasey's brook, and about sixty or eighty rods south of the point where Marshall street crosses that stream. Some remains of the dam are still visible. On the 28th of December, 1739, he conveyed his farm and buildings—dwelling-house, barn and grist-mill,—to "Luke Lincoln, of Scituate, Co. of Plymouth," in consideration of £1,800. About two months later, February 14, 1740, he bought a farm of John Glasford, and lived on it until September 23, 1748, when he conveyed it to Jabez Green, of Stoneham, for £3,000, old tenor, bills of credit. This place was occupied by Green, and later by his son, Abel Green. It is now owned by Charles M. Marsh, and lies a little east of the north end of the Lynde reservoir, the house being at the junction of Fowler and Reservoir streets.

William soon afterwards removed to Shrewsbury, where he remained several years. In 1766 he was living in Paxton, where, on the 8th of April, 1768, he conveyed half of the farm and buildings where he dwelt to his son William, and the other half to his son Ralph. This farm is now the Tyler Penniman place, one mile east of Paxton centre, and was a part of the large tract originally owned by William's father, Ralph, and Jonathan Witt.

William appears to have been among the few wealthiest men of his time in Leicester. He dealt largely in real estate, and many of his conveyances are upon record. In some of them he calls himself "yeoman," in others "joyner."

His will was executed March 22, 1769, and entered for probate March 29, 1769.

The children of William and Anna (Howard) Earle were:

143-1. WILLIAM EARLE, b. April 27, 1714; m. Mary Cutting.
144-2. ELIZABETH EARLE, b. May 12, 1716; m. John Potter.

145-3. MARY EARLE, b. Feb. 28, 1719; m. July 1, 1741, James Lawton, Jr.
146-4. DAVID EARLE, b. Aug. 16, 1721; m. Martha Earle [167-1].
147-5. JUDITH EARLE, b. Aug. 11, 1723; m. 1st, Geo. Cutting, of Cambridge, and had a son, Earle Cutting; 2d, —— Graves.
148-6. RALPH EARLE, b. Nov. 13, 1726; m. Phebe Whittemore.
149-7. JOHN EARLE, b. March 1, 1729.

[82-2]. John[4] Earle (Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Mary (Hicks) Earle, b. Feb. 24, 1694, in Freetown, Mass.; m. Dec. 24, 1719, Sarah, widow of John Borden, of Swanzey, Mass.; and their children were born in Swanzey.

He lived some years in Portsmouth and the records of that town mention him as "John Earll, Jr.," his father having a brother John in the same town.

On the 15th of November, 1715, in consideration, as he says, of one hundred pounds [£100], "paid by my unkle John Earll, of Portsmouth," he conveyed to said John [16-6] "all that my land Lying Eastward of the Eastward Row of cherry trees, which Land was given to me by my father, Ralph Earll, by Estimation four acres." The deed is signed, "John Earll, Jr."

He removed to Swanzey before the time of his marriage.

The children of John and Mary (Hicks) Earle were:

150-1. MARY EARLE, b. May 4, 1722.
151-2. PATIENCE EARLE, b. Sept. 2, 1724.
152-3. JOHN EARLE, b. July 4, 1727; m. Patience Stafford; and supposed to have removed to Perquimans Co., North Carolina.
153-4. JOSEPH EARLE, b. Jan. 25, 1730; m. Feb. 12, 1747, Eunice Hathaway.
154-5. LYDIA EARLE, b. Aug. 2, 1732.

[83-3]. Mary[4] Earle (Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Ralph and Mary (Hicks) Earle, b. Oct. 24, 1693, in Freetown, Mass.; m. —— Sheffield.

Their child was:

155-1. NATHANIEL SHEFFIELD.

[84–4]. Elizabeth[4] Earle (Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Ralph and Mary (Hicks) Earle, b. Dec. 24, 1696, in Freetown, Mass.; m. at Newport, R. I., July 5, 1716, Robert (b. Jan. 5, 1696), son of Robert and Mary (Wodell) Lawton, of Portsmouth, where their children were born.

Their children were:

156–1. JOB LAWTON, b. Jan. 10, 1717.
157–2. ROBERT LAWTON, b. Nov. 17, 1718.
158–3. ELIZABETH LAWTON, b. July 17, 1720.
159–4. GEORGE LAWTON, b. Dec. 28, 1721.
160–5. MARY LAWTON, b. Dec. 17, 1723.

[85–5]. Sarah[4] Earle (Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Ralph and Mary (Hicks) Earle, b. Jan. 18, 1698, in Freetown, Mass.; m. Sept. 6, 1714, Stephen Manchester, of Tiverton; and resided in Tiverton.

Their children were:

161–1. EDWARD MANCHESTER, b. Nov. 1, 1718.
162–2. MARTHA MANCHESTER, b. July 31, 1720.

[87–7]. Patience[4] Earle (Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Ralph and Mary (Hicks) Earle, b. Nov. 24, 1702, in Freetown, Mass.; m. Benjamin Richardson, a housewright; and d. in 1755, in Leicester.

She was buried in the Friends' burying-ground, her grave being next north of that of her mother.

The children of Patience and Benjamin Richardson were:

163–1. ABIGAIL RICHARDSON, b. Dec. 30, 1725.
164–2. BENJAMIN RICHARDSON, b. Feb. 20, 1731; m. in 1758, Eunice, dau. of Dudley Wade Swan, of Leicester.
165–3. ELIZABETH RICHARDSON, b. July 9, 1734; m. Nathan Earle [168–2].
166–4. NATHANIEL RICHARDSON, b. Jan. 15, 1737; m. Ruth Gilkey, of Plainfield.

[89–9]. Robert[4] Earle (Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Mary (Hicks) Earle, b. March 2, 1706, in Freetown, Mass.; m. 1st, Mary Newhall (b. Nov. 5, 1704), dau. of Thomas Newhall,* of Leicester, formerly of Malden, by whom he had ten children; and 2d, March 23, 1756, Hepsibah Johnson, of Worcester, Mass., by whom he had two children. He d. in 1796.

At the age of eleven years he removed with his father to Leicester, Mass. Upon his attainment of the age of twenty-one years his father gave him by deed, dated March 9, 1727–8, O. S., and without consideration other than "love, good will and affection," two tracts of land. Upon one of them, containing eighty acres, he erected a dwelling, on the corner of Earle and Mulberry streets, in which he resided during all his married life. On the 11th of April, 1792, he conveyed the place to his grandsons, Pliny and Jonah Earle, in consideration of £300. In the next following year Pliny removed the dwelling to the opposite (East) side of the road, and erected upon the old site the house which, with some additions, is still standing. Here Robert passed the remainder of his days in the family of his grandson Pliny.

He had a strong constitution and retained his vigor and activity in a remarkable degree until very near the close of his life. After the ninetieth anniversary of his birth, he went alone and on horseback to visit his sons in Chester, now Vt. On his return, he arrived home at night, having ridden fifty miles on that day. On the following morning he said he could ride to Boston on that day, without feeling fatigue. Once at least, he rode in one day from Leicester to Newport, R. I., to attend the yearly meeting of the Society of Friends, of which Society, as heretofore mentioned, he was a member.

Some years before his death, he was returning from Worcester in company with his brother William [81–1], both on horseback, when upon "Potash-plain," they tried the speed of their horses, both of them pacers, when Robert's horse fell, threw him, and so injured him that he never fully recovered from the consequent lameness.

[91–11]. Benjamin[4] Earle (Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Mary (Hicks) Earle, b. March 14, 1711, in Freetown, Mass.; m. 1st, Abigail Newhall, dau. of Thomas Newhall, of Leicester, formerly of Malden, who was the mother of all his children; 2d, widow Deborah (Buffum) Slade (b. Dec. 1, 1716; d. Dec. 26, 1804), dau. of Jonathan Buffum; and d. Dec. 18, 1760.

Benjamin was the youngest of eleven children and appears to have lived with his father during the life of the latter. January 18, 1753, his father "in consideration of £100 lawful money and love and affection" conveyed to him the homestead, consisting of the buildings and 140 acres of land. He afterward built a grist-mill upon the stream running through the westerly part of the farm. Traces of the dam are still visible, thirty or forty rods below the remains of another dam, a short distance south of the Friends' cemetery, where his brother Robert's grandson Timothy erected a saw- and grist-mill in 1815.

He was chairman of the Board of Selectmen in 1757.

According to the town records, he "Declared himself a Quaker and Desired his name to be entered as such." August 13, 1739, he and Nathaniel Potter deeded to Samuel Thayer of Mendon, the lot upon which the Friends erected their meeting-house. Much the larger part of the lot was taken from Benjamin's farm, which was a part of the original farm of his father Ralph. December 27, 1739, Thayer conveyed it to Benjamin Earle, Nathaniel Potter, Thomas Smith and John Wells, with the condition that it should never be divided, but held in common, and each one's share at his decease should go to the survivors and their heirs or assigns forever.

Benjamin's son John enlisted in the army of the United States. In 1760, while posted at a southern station he was attacked with the small-pox. His father went for him, brought him home, took the disease and both father and son died of it. In his will, executed in 1759, he gave his son Antipas "that farm that I bought of John Hasey, being fifty acres with the Building and improvements, and ten acres of my homestead." This farm is on Fowler street, at the head of the Lynde reservoir, and the modern house is on the site of the original and much larger one. To his son John he gave 120 acres "in the Northeasterly part of Leicester"; to his son Gardiner, "all my homestead" except the ten acres to Antipas, "with all my buildings, mills and improvements thereon, also all my farming tools and one half of my stock of creatures of all kinds the other half to be equally divided among all four of my sons." Gardiner was to pay Antipas twenty-five pounds, thirteen shillings and fourpence. Antipas was made executor and residuary legatee of real estate.

He afterward married his second wife and, as has been seen, in the latter part of 1760, was removed by a somewhat sudden and unexpected death. He had made no change in his will and consequently his widow was unprovided for. Under these circumstances the action of the sons was highly commended and is worthy of commemoration. They appended to the will the following declaration:

"We, Newell Earl and Antipas Earl for our Selves & Thomas Wheeler in Behalf of and with the free Consent of Gardiner Earl to whom he is Guardian Notwithstanding what is Contained in the foregoing Will in Consideration that since the foregoing will was made ye Deceased married and hath now left a Widow We Do therefor hereby give our full and free Consent & agree that our Honored Mother-in Law Deborah Earl Shall have hold & Enjoy one third part of the whol of s^d^ Deceased's personal Estate given & not given away in this Will after the just Debts &c. are paid as Witness our hands Feb'y 5th 1761. Newell Earl. Antipass Earl. Gardiner Earl. Thos. Wheeler Guard^n^.

Test Timo Paine.

"I Newel Earl Eldest Son of S^d^ Deceased agree that the Two Thirds of our Dec^d^ Fathers personall Estate shall be Divided Equally between me & my Two Brothers—in Case our S^d^ mother Enjoys ye Other Third. Feby 5th 1761.

Test Timo Paine. Newell Earl."

Newhall Earle had received nearly all his share of the estate before the will was made.

The children of Benjamin and Abigail (Newhall) Earle were:

190–1. NEWHALL EARLE, b. March 15, 1735; m. Rachel Stoddard.
191–2. ANTIPAS EARLE, b. June 1, 1737; m. Mercy Slade.
192–3. JOHN EARLE, b. Nov. 18, 1740; d. Nov. 25, 1760.

193-4. GARDINER EARLE, b. Feb. 21, 1744; m. 1st, Rebecca Brown; 2d, March 11, 1767, Phebe Hallock. Gardiner lived on his father's homestead until November, 1780, when he sold it to his brother Antipas and removed to the State of New York. He was in Orange Co. in 1786.

194-5. BENJAMIN EARLE, b. March 28, 1747; d. Dec. 24, 1747.

[92-1]. William[4] Earle (Thomas,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Thomas and Mary (Taber) Earle, b. in Dartmouth, Mass., or Portsmouth, R. I.; m. 1st, June 25, 1718, Mehitable Brayton, of Portsmouth, R. I., by whom he had three children; 2d, April 6, 1737, Abigail, dau. of Josiah and Bethiah Abbott, and widow of John Lawton, by whom he had four children. He resided in Portsmouth, R. I., and d. Aug. 14, 1744.

Their children were:

195-1. WILLIAM EARLE, b. March 16, 1721; m. 1st, Sarah Dennis; 2d, widow Catharine (Williams) Lunt.
196-2. DAVID EARLE, b. July 11, 1722; m. Abigail Lawton.
197-3. MARY EARLE, b. Aug. 11, 1725.
198-4. THOMAS EARLE, b. Dec. 21, 1736; m. Mary Tripp.
199-5. JOHN EARLE, b. March 16, 1738; m. Dorcas Barney.
200-6. ABBOTT EARLE, b. Dec. 12, 1740; d. young.
201-7. PHEBE EARLE, b. Nov. 5, 1743; d. Oct. 20, 1828, unmarried, in Mendon, Mass.

[95-4]. Oliver[4] Earle (Thomas,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Thomas and Mary (Taber) Earle; m. June 9, 1720, Rebecca, dau. of Samuel and Martha (Tripp) Sherman, of Portsmouth, R. I.; and d. in 1766. He resided in Swanzey.

In 1716, his father deeded to him one-half of his farm in Swanzey. Oliver had been living in the city of New York, where he was engaged in the East India trade. His father was then in Portsmouth.

In 1721, Oliver bought the other half of the farm of his father for £1,100.

From Oliver's will, which was executed in 1766, we make the following extract:

"I give and Bequeath unto my well beloved Wife Rebecca Earl one Equal half part of all my Houshold goods forever and the Improvement of the One Equal half part of my Dwelling House I now live In and one half of the Cellar and one half of the Gardens and a priviledge of the wells and a Priviledge to pass and repass where she shall have Occation and also Sufficient firewood to be cutt and brought home to her door for her own Use and Two Hundred pounds Weight of good Pork and Three Hundred pounds Weight of good beef & Twenty pounds Weight of good Sheeps wool and Twenty pounds Weight of good flax from the Swingle and Ten Bushels of Good Indian Corn and five Bushels of Rye and five Barrels of Cyder and as many Apples as She Shall have Occation for her Own Use and a Priviledge to keep fowles for her Own Use also I give unto my said beloved Wife five Pounds Lawfull Money all the aforesaid giftes and Bequeaths are to be paid her Yearly and Every Year by my Executors hereafter named so long as She Shall Remain my Widow and no Longer.

[105–5]. William[4] Earle (John,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of John and Mary (Wait) Earle, b. March 28, 1710, at Portsmouth, R. I.; m. May 29, 1740, Mary Lawton, of Newport, R. I.; d. April 15, 1797.

From "The Medley or New Bedford Marine Journal," of April 21, 1797: "Died at Westport, on the 15th inst., William Earl, in the 88th year of his age; a worthy, respectable farmer, and with truth can be said to have been 'an honest man—the noblest work of God!'"

He resided near the head of Westport river, in that part of Dartmouth which was during his life set off as Westport. After his decease his farm, containing about 200 acres, was divided into four parts, and owned, in 1860, by Willard Slocum, his house being near the site of the old homestead, Canaan Dyer, Restcome Manchester and Stephen Cornell. William's house was a fine specimen of the best rural architecture of the time.

The children of William and Mary (Lawton) Earle were:

232–1. LAWTON EARLE, b. April 2, 1741; m. Mary Palmer.
233–2. JOHN EARLE, b. Nov. 12, 1745; m. Priscilla Hilliard. } Twins.

[143–1]. William[5] Earle (William,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Anna (Howard) Earle, b. April 27, 1714, in Freetown, Mass.; m. Jan. 31, 1740, Mary Cutting, of Leicester; and d. Feb. 6, 1805. His widow d. May 21, 1808, æt. 91 years, 7 months.

He was taken by his father when a child to Leicester, Mass. His father, as has been seen, conveyed to him, in 1737, eighty-seven acres of the south part of his farm. Upon this he built a large one-story gambrel-roofed house, with an L, in which he lived and died. In his will he gave this homestead to his sons, James and Joel, the former of whom purchased the interest of the latter and made the place his home until death. The house was on Mulberry street, nearly one-fourth of a mile north of its junction with Earle street. It was burned down about 1860, when occupied by James's son, Nathaniel, but the cellar still remains.

William also bequeathed to his son Oliver "the farm on which he lives." This farm is in Paxton and adjoins the Penniman place on the north.

William, for many years, was familiarly known in Leicester as "Uncle Will." He retained the vigor and energy of manhood until the close of his life, pursuing, with unabated skill and pleasure, his favorite pastime of hunting. He was found dead in his bed, having retired the preceding evening in usual health.

The children of William and Mary (Cutting) Earle were:

280–1. JOHN EARLE, b. Dec. 3, 1740; m. Sarah Wheaton.
281–2. LOIS EARLE, b. Jan. 25, 1743; m. Nathan Whittemore.

[144–2]. Elizabeth[5] Earle (William,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of William and Anna (Howard) Earle, b. May 12, 1715, in Freetown, Mass.; was taken with her father's family to Leicester, Mass.; and m. in 1736, John Potter, Jr. (d. 1797), of Leicester. A housewright.

Their children were:

288–1. WILLIAM POTTER, b. Feb. 23, 1738.
289–2. LOIS POTTER, b. 1741.
290–3. MARY POTTER, b. June 29, 1745.

[146–4]. David[5] Earle (William,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Anna (Howard) Earle, b. Aug. 16, 1721, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Martha [167–1], dau. of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle; d. about 1766.

He lived for some years on the farm next east (and in the limits of Worcester) of the farm upon which his father lived, and sold to Jabez Green; after which he removed to the farm next north of the Leicester Town farm.

The children of David and Martha (Earle) Earle were:

291–1. SARAH EARLE; m. in 1767, John Beard, and resided, 1791, in Ward, now Auburn, Mass.
292–2. DAVID EARLE, b. July 15, 1748; m. Rebecca Brown.
293–3. MARY EARLE, b. Oct. 18, 1750; m. Oliver Earle [283–4].

298–8. JOHN EARLE, b. May 13, 1762; m. Eunice Allen.

Martha Earle, the widow of David, m. 2d, April 7, 1768, Hezekiah Ward, who came from Grafton and owned the farm now belonging to the town.

Their child was:

299–9. HEZEKIAH WARD, b. 1771.

[148–6]. Ralph[5] Earle (William,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Anna (Howard) Earle, b. Nov. 13, 1726, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1st, July 19, 1750, Phebe (b. 1727), dau. of John and Rebekah Whittemore; 2d, Oct. 1, 1775, Mrs. Naomi Kinnicutt, of Providence, R. I. At the time of his first marriage he lived in Shrewsbury, Mass., but, after the birth of the eldest child, he removed to Leicester, where the rest of the children were born. He d. about 1808, at the house of his son Clark, in Leicester.

In 1768, his father conveyed to him one-half of his farm in Paxton. Gov. Hutchinson sent to Ralph a Captain's commission in the British Army, bearing date June 17, 1776. This was rejected by Ralph; but he soon after received a similar commission from Gen. Washington, and served in the American Army during nearly the whole of the Revolutionary War.

The children of Ralph and Phebe (Whittemore) Earle were:

300–1. RALPH EARLE, b. May 11, 1751; m. Sarah Gates.
301–2. CLARK EARLE, b. April 17, 1753; m. 1st, Hepsibeth Howard; 2d, widow Matilda Chace.
302–3. ARTEMAS EARLE, b. Nov. 28, 1754; d. March 19, 1755.
303–4. JAMES EARLE, b. May 1, 1761; m. widow Caroline G. P. Smyth.
304–5. DEXTER EARLE, b. Dec. 10, 1776, in Paxton, Mass.

[153–4]. Joseph[5] Earle (John,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of John and Sarah (Borden) Earle, b. Jan. 25, 1730, in Swanzey, Mass.; m. Feb. 12, 1747, Eunice, dau. of Richard and Deborah Hathaway, of Dartmouth, Mass. His widow m. 1755, John Perry, of Tiverton, R. I.

Their child was:

305–1. DEBORAH EARLE, b. May 4, 1752.

[168–2]. Nathan[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. May 12, 1728, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1751, Elizabeth Richardson, of Leicester.

He resided for some years in Leicester, and removed, apparently between 1760 and 1765, to New York, now Vermont. He was living, in 1777, in Rockingham. It is said that he was one of the "patentees," of the town of Chester, Vt.

The children of Nathan and Elizabeth (Richardson) Earle were:

306–1. CALEB EARLE, b. July 17, 1752.
307–2. NATHAN EARLE, b. July 8, 1755.
308–3. PATIENCE EARLE.
309–4. BETSEY EARLE.

[169–3]. Mary[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. Aug. 10, 1730, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Jan. 24, 1750, Jonathan Sargent, Jr., of Leicester, and resided in Leicester.

Their children were:

310–1. JONATHAN SARGENT, b. Feb. 17, 1752; he was wounded in battle, during the Revolutionary war, and died on his way home.
311–2. MARY SARGENT, b. May 4, 1753; m. in 1774, Timothy Sprague.
312–3. ELEANOR SARGENT, b. Oct. 30, 1754; m. in 1776, John (b. Jan. 13, 1738), son of Steward and Elizabeth (Scott) Southgate; and d. in 1825.
313–4. WILLIAM SARGENT, b. Sept. 7, 1756; m. Rachel Todd.
314–5. SAMUEL SARGENT, b. 1761; m. Martha Johnson.
315–6. ELIHU SARGENT, b. 1764; d. unmarried, about 1835.
316–7. CATHERINE SARGENT; m. in 1790, Amos Livermore.

John Southgate, who married Eleanor Sargent [312–3], was the adjutant of the regiment of minute-men commanded by Col. William Henshaw, and marched to Cambridge on the alarm of the 19th April, 1775. In September, 1776, he was commissioned as second officer in an artillery company, under the title of "captain-lieutenant." He left the army in the summer or autumn of 1778, but still continued active in promoting the interests of the Revolution. Capt. Southgate engaged extensively in purchasing wild lands in Maine. After the death of his oldest son he had occasion to visit these lands from time to time, to dispose of them and to protect them from trespassers. On the 7th August, 1806, having occasion to be at Stillwater for this purpose, and wishing to pass a short distance down the river, he got upon a couple of logs in the stream, and was soon after thrown into the water in some way, and was drowned. His body was soon recovered and buried at Kenduskeag Point, on the banks of the Penobscot.

For the family of Mary (Earle) and Jonathan Sargent and their descendants, see "Genealogy of the Sargent Family."

[170–4]. Elizabeth[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. Oct. 18, 1732, in Leicester, Mass.; m. May 9, 1750, John (b. 1721), son of John and Rebekah Whittemore, and resided in Leicester and Spencer, Mass.

Their children were:

317–1. JOHN WHITTEMORE, b. Dec. 1, 1750.
318–2. MARY WHITTEMORE, b. Nov. 28, 1753.

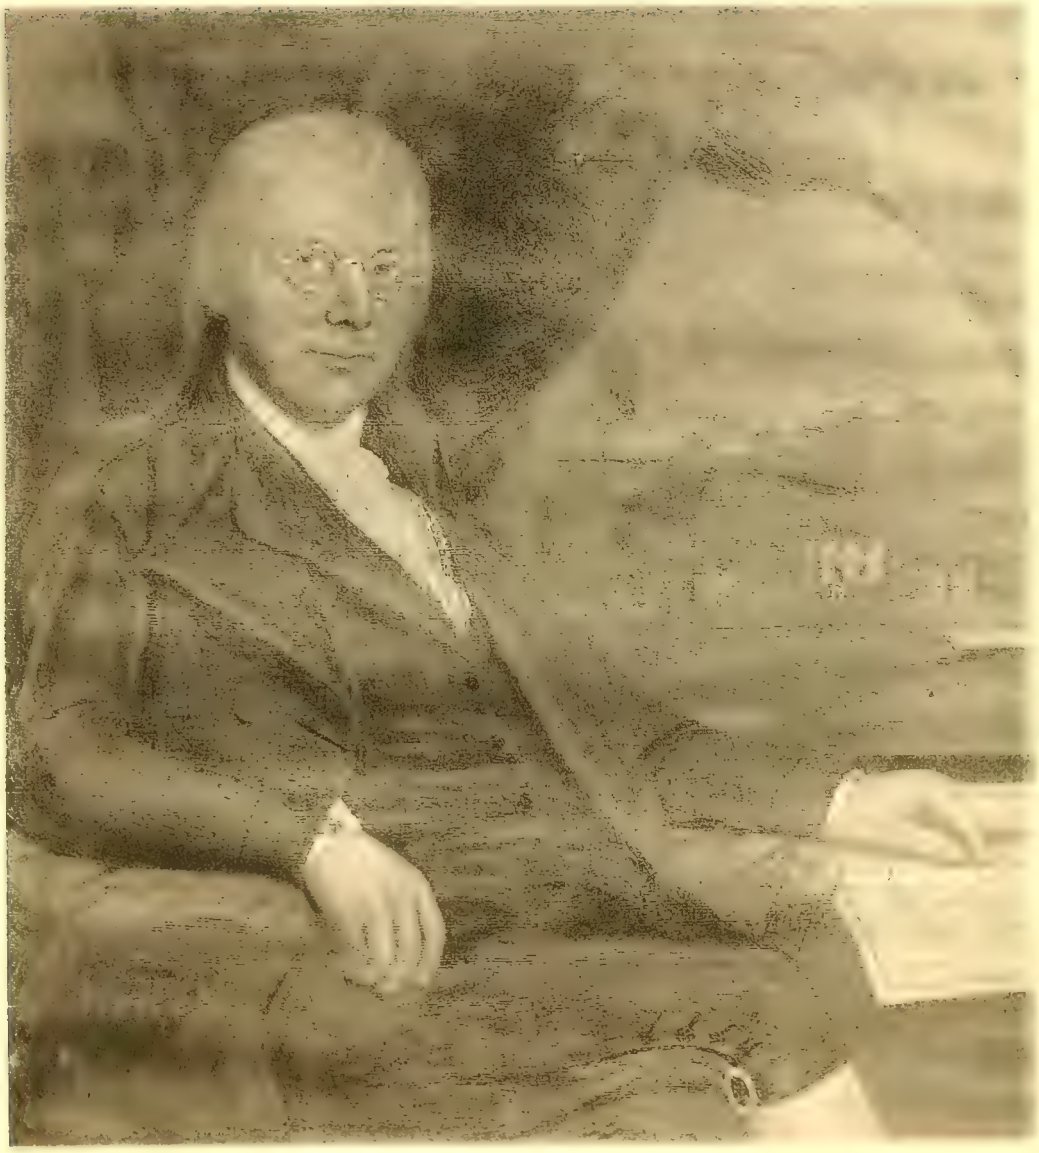
[171–5]. George[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. March 3, 1735, in Leicester, Mass.; m. April 26, 1757, Mary (b. March 13, 1738; d. May 16, 1824), dau. of Thomas and Azubah (Rice) Baker, of Shrewsbury, Mass.

Removed to Chester, Vt., about 1770; commanded a company of militia at the battle of Bennington, Vt., and on the 2d of July, 1806, while engaged in his work, which was that of a gunsmith, "fell and died almost instantly," probably from a disease of the heart.



THOMAS EARLE,

OF LEICESTER, MASS.

From a portrait in oil, painted by Ralph Earle [300-1] in the year 1800. This copy is reversed. In the original, it is the right hand which rests on the table; and in the view of Mr. Earle's homestead, in the back-ground, the large gate is on the left of the dwelling-house. This picture is the best that could be obtained: the coloring of the portrait being such as not to respond well to the photographic process.

Their children were:

325–1. GEORGE EARLE, b. Nov. 17, 1757; drowned in attempting to swim across the St. Lawrence river.
326–2. FREDERICK EARLE, b. Oct. 11, 1759; m. Elizabeth Young.

331–7. WALTER EARLE, b. March 18, 1773; m. Hannah Allen.
332–8. CATHERINE EARLE, b. April 30, 1775; d. Aug. 31, 1777.
333–9. ALVAN EARLE, b. Aug. 20, 1778; m. Fanny Shaw.

[172–6]. Thomas[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. Aug. 27, 1737, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Jan. 22, 1761, Hannah (b. 1740; d. Aug. 22, 1799), dau. of Nathaniel and Hannah (Southgate) Wait, of Leicester; and d. March 21, 1819.

The following is extracted from "Washburn's History of Leicester:"

"Mr. Earle resided in Cherry Valley, Leicester, in the house where Mr. Heman Burr now lives. [The house was burned in 1873]. He planted the fine rows of sycamores that stood [some of the trees are still standing] before it, on the day of the battle of Lexington. He was distinguished for his mechanical skill and ingenuity. He manufactured a gun of exquisite workmanship for Col. William Henshaw, in 1773; and when Col. Henshaw marched to Cambridge, in 1775, he took it into the service. Here it fell under the observation of Gen. Washington, who admired it so much that he ordered one of the same pattern. Mr. Earle having completed it, loaded and primed it, and placed it under water, all but the muzzle, during a night; and, taking it out in the morning, discharged it as if it had just been loaded. He carried it to New York, where the army then lay, and delivered it personally to Gen. Washington, having travelled the distance on foot, and carried it upon his shoulder. It received great commendation for its perfection of workmanship."

The gun was marked with the maker's name, "Thomas Earl." Upon reading this, Gen. Washington said, "Mr. Earle, your name is not correctly spelled; E-a-r-l is a title of nobility; you should add an e to it."

A very good likeness of Thomas, painted, in 1800, by his cousin Ralph Earle, is in the possession of his granddaughter, Mrs. Melinda Earle (Nye) Chandler, of Springfield, Mass.*

The children of Thomas and Hannah (Wait) Earle were:

334–1. ASAHEL EARLE, b. Dec. 21, 1761; m. Persis Newhall.

342–9. POLLY EARLE; d. unmarried, Sept. 29, 1804.

[173–7]. Esek[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. Feb. 10, 1741, in Leicester, Mass.; m. in 1762, Mehitable Snow, of Leicester (who d. in 1810, in Champion, N. Y.). At the time of his marriage, he lived in Rutland, Mass., afterward in Leicester; then removed, in 1764 or 1765, to Chester, Vt., and subsequently, but before 1777, to Chesterfield, Vt., and about 1804, to Champion, Jefferson Co., N. Y., where he died Oct. 24, 1823.

He was one of the pioneers in the settlement of the country, and, as a writer says of him, "loved hunting and trapping, and made traps with which he caught a great number of wolves, bears and panthers."

The children of Esek and Mehitable (Snow) Earle were:

343– 1. PERSIS EARLE, b. March 26, 1763; m. Ellery Partridge.
344– 2. ASHBEL EARLE, b. March 17, 1765; m. 1st, Betsey Smith; 2d, Azubah Lord.
345– 3. PHILA EARLE; m. Paul Penniman.
346– 4. JOHN EARLE, b. May 14, 1771; m. 1st, Abigail Chase; 2d, Mary Avril.

*It represents him in the ruffled shirt and knee-breeches with silver buckles fashionable in his time; and in the back-ground there is a view of his residence, with the row of Sycamores in front.

347- 5. ROBERT EARLE; m. Melicent Kittredge. He was a physician in Champion.
348- 6. WILLIAM EARLE, b. 1777; m. 1st, Betsey Chapin; 2d, Polly Snell.
349- 7. LEWIS EARLE; m. Hepsibah Coleman.
350- 8. LOTAN EARLE, b. 1782; m. Amarilla Barto.
351- 9. OTIS EARLE, b. Jan. 15, 1784; m. Lucinda Smith.
352-10. DELANCEY EARLE; d. young.
353-11. ELKENNY EARLE; d. young.
354-12. GUY EARLE, b. Oct. 17, 1789; m. 1st, Cynthia Smith; 2d, Mrs. Polly Haywood; 3d, Mrs. Luthera Hall; 4th, Mrs. Sarah (King) Earle, widow of Samuel [829-11.]

[174-8]. Robert[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. Oct. 10, 1743, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Sarah (b. April 15, 1745; d. Sept. 4, 1824), dau. of Henry and Elizabeth (Rice) Hunt, of Leicester;* resided in Leicester, and d. Jan. 23, 1819.

They lived in the house on Mulberry street, next south of its junction with Earle street. The homestead is now known as "Earle Ridge," and is occupied as a summer residence by Stephen C. Earle, architect, of Worcester, who is a great-grandson of Robert and Sarah. Robert built the old part of the house in 1771, upon the tract "twenty-five acres, more or less," deeded to him by his father on the 3d of September of that year.

"He was a man of great integrity, and much respected; and the regard in which he was held was indicated by the friendly title by which he was generally known, 'Uncle Robert.'"—[Washburn's History of Leicester.

His wife shared in the same regard, and was called "Aunt Sarah."

They and all of their children were members of the Society of Friends. Of the five sons, one lived in the house with his parents, but at the time of his decease, in 1819, had nearly completed a large dwelling-house about fifteen rods south of that of his parents; and the four others lived within a mile of their father's homestead, and in sight of it, three of them in large houses built by them.

*At the time of her marriage her father's family lived upon what is now the Town Farm.

The late Rev. John Nelson, for more than half a century the eminently worthy pastor of the First Congregational Church in Leicester, informed the compiler of this book, that, in 1812, he visited the district school in this neighborhood, at the time of its "examination," and that of the forty pupils present, twenty-one were the grandchildren of Robert and Sarah Earle.

The children of Robert and Sarah (Hunt) Earle were:

355– 1. PLINY EARLE, b. Dec. 17, 1762; m. Patience Buffum.
356– 2. JONAH EARLE, b. Aug. 10, 1765; m. Elizabeth Southgate.
357– 3. SILAS EARLE, b. May 26, 1767; m. Rachel Thornton.
358– 4. ELIZABETH EARLE, b. July 5, 1769; m. David Hoag.
359– 5. PERSIS EARLE, b. Sept. 19, 1771; m. Edward Hallock.
360– 6. HENRY EARLE, b. March 13, 1774; m. 1st, Martha Aldrich; 2d, Miriam Fry; 3d, widow Ruth (Keese) Earle.
361– 7. LYDIA EARLE, b. Jan. 16, 1776; m. 1st, John Fry; 2d, Enoch Breed.
362– 8. TIMOTHY EARLE, b. March 2, 1778; m. Ruth Keese.
363– 9. SARAH EARLE, b. Jan. 1, 1781; m. Jonathan Fry, of Bolton, Mass.; and d. in 1805, without issue.
364–10. HANNAH EARLE, b. April 9, 1784; d. Nov. 3, 1795.

[175–9]. Lydia[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. Aug. 15, 1746, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1st, in 1766, John Wilson; 2d, Micah Johnson; 3d, Jonas Newton. Her children were all by her first marriage. After the third marriage she removed, with all her surviving children, to Vermont, where she d. in 1812. Several of the oldest children were born in Leicester.

Their children were:

365– 1. MARY WILSON, b. July 17, 1768; m. May 9, 1793, Frederick Parker.
366– 2. CATHERINE WILSON, b. Aug. 17, 1770; m. Nov. 13, 1788, Jonathan Green; d. April 16, 1842; issue, 6 children.
367– 3. ESTHER WILSON, b. Oct. 11, 1772; m. Nov. 5, 1789, Dr. Thomas Hersey; d. in 1794, without issue.
368– 4. DANIEL WILSON, b. Dec. 6, 1774; m. Jan. 3, 1798, Sally Upham; issue, 7 children.
369– 5. MIRIAM WILSON, b. Feb. 15, 1777; m. Jan. 11, 1798, Charles Woodworth; d. March 1, 1827; issue, 9 children.

370– 6. JOHN WILSON, b. Dec. 23, 1779; m. Janette Campbell; d. Aug. 6, 1830; issue, 7 children.
371– 7. LYDIA WILSON, b. May 15, 1781; m. Dr. Moses R. Porter; issue, 6 children.
372– 8. ROSWELL WILSON, b. Oct. 17, 1783; m. Mary Fassitt; d. Nov. 12, 1832, without issue.
373– 9. DURFEE WILSON, b. Jan. 23, 1785; m. Fanny Campbell; d. Oct. 11, 1850; issue, 9 children.
374–10. NATHANIEL WILSON, b. about 1788; d. unm., in Mass., æt. about 20 years.
375–11. ELIZA E. WILSON, b. Jan. 28, 1790; m. in 1809, Otis Wilson; d. July 25, 1842; issue, 4 children.

[176–10]. Marmaduke[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Mary (Newhall) Earle, b. March 8, 1749, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1772, Elizabeth (b. June 22, 1755; d. Nov. 3, 1840), dau. of Jonas and Rebecca (Richardson) Newton, of Paxton, Mass.; resided in Paxton, and d. May 29, 1839.

He was a farmer, and his homestead was on the county road to Barre, about a mile northwest of Paxton centre. He and his wife retained their membership of the Society of Friends during life, and were buried in that Society's cemetery in Leicester. No one of the children belonged to the Society.

Their children were:

376– 1. LUCRETIA EARLE, b. Feb. 25, 1773; m. Samuel Brown.
377– 2. CATHERINE EARLE, b. March 3, 1775; m. Francis Washburn.
378– 3. WINTHROP EARLE, b. May 5, 1777; d. unm., in Paxton, Jan. 15, 1836.
379– 4. DELIVERANCE EARLE, b. Nov. 10, 1779; m. Jonathan Cunningham.
380– 5. SAMUEL EARLE, b. Dec. 26, 1781; d. June 21, 1787.
381– 6. AMASA EARLE, b. March 11, 1784; m. Lucy Howe.
382– 7. PHILIP EARLE, b. April 10, 1786; m. Patty Barton.
383– 8. REBECCA EARLE, b. July 21, 1788; m. James Thompson.
384– 9. EMORY EARLE, b. Sept. 10, 1790; m. Eunice Smith.
385–10. CANDACE EARLE, b. Nov. 3, 1792; m. William Boynton.
386–11. PERSIS EARLE, b. Dec. 18, 1794; m. William H. Scott.
387–12. PHEBE EARLE, b. June 22, 1797; m. Moses Parkhurst.
388–13. ELMER EARLE, b. Jan. 6, 1800; m. Sally Bellows.
389–14. HOMER EARLE, b. May 6, 1802; d. Aug. 30, 1804.

[177–11]. Phebe[5] Earle (Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Robert and Hepzibah (Johnson) Earle, b. Dec. 22, 1756, in Leicester, Mass.; m. (intentions published Dec. 31, 1772), Francis Flagg, of Holden.

They lived and died in Worcester, their farm and homestead being upon the Holden road, about two miles from Lincoln square.

Their children were:

390– 1. NANCY FLAGG, b. July 17, 1775; d. Aug., 1775.
391– 2. SAMUEL FLAGG, b. Oct. 30, 1777; d. unm., about 1810.
392– 3. SARAH FLAGG, b. Nov. 19, 1779; m. John Flagg.
393– 4. MARY FLAGG, b. Oct. 22, 1781; d. Oct. 16, 1782.
394– 5. JOHN FLAGG, b. Aug. 26, 1783; m. Harriet Boynes.
395– 6. LUCRETIA FLAGG, b. Aug. 27, 1785; d. 1787.
396– 7. TIMOTHY FLAGG, b. March 18, 1788; d. 1788.
397– 8. FRANCIS B. FLAGG, b. March 10, 1789.
398– 9. RUFUS FLAGG, } Twins, b. April 3, 1791; both d. at 399–10. WINTHROP FLAGG, } the age of about 4 years.
400–11. DORRETE FLAGG, b. Sept. 13, 1793; d. in infancy.
401–12. DORRETE FLAGG; d. unmarried.

[190–1]. Newhall[5] Earle (Benjamin,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Benjamin and Abigail (Newhall) Earle, b. March 15, 1735, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Feb. 21, 1759, Rachel Stoddard, of Leicester.

His farm was on the southern slope of Asnebumskit, and within the limits of Paxton. The house was on the north side of the county road from Worcester to Barre. Having sold his real estate to Henry Slade, he removed, in 1774, to Vermont, where he died. He was in Guilford, Vt., in 1776.

Their children were:

402– 1. MEHITABLE EARLE, b. July 8, 1759.
403– 2. JOHN EARLE, b. Dec. 4, 1760.
404– 3. MARY EARLE, b. June 3, 1762.
405– 4. EUNICE EARLE, b. Jan. 5, 1764.
Supposed to have removed from Vermont to New York State.
406– 5. SAMUEL EARLE, b. July 30, 1765; m. Sarah Wilder.
407– 6. LYDIA EARLE, b. April 11, 1767.
408– 7. ALPHEUS EARLE, b. March 9, 1769.
409– 8. PHEBE EARLE, b. March 30, 1771.

410– 9. RUTH EARLE, b. Sept. 19, 1772.
411–10. ESTHER EARLE, b. March 18, 1774.
All except Samuel removed, as above, and it is said that Alpheus lived in Camillus, Onondaga Co., N. Y.

[191–2]. Antipas[5] Earle (Benjamin,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Benjamin and Abigail (Newhall) Earle, b. in Leicester, Mass., June 1, 1737 (31st of 3d mo., 1737, O. S.—Records of Smithfield Monthly Meeting of Friends); m. April 9, 1761, Mercy (b. 11th mo., 4th, 1744, O. S.), dau. of Edward and Deborah (Buffum) Slade, of Swanzey, Mass.; d. June 18, 1817.

He resided upon the farm given him by his father, the house having been in the valley, about one-fourth of a mile east of the original Ralph Earle homestead. His farm is now in part overflowed by the water of the Lynde reservoir, at its northern extremity. The old house was taken down and a new one erected about the year 1858.

Antipas died while absent on a visit, and was interred in the Friends' cemetery, Smithfield, R. I., about one mile southerly from Woonsocket. He was a man of blameless life and conduct, and of high moral principles, a sincere believer in the doctrines of the Quakers, and a rigid observer of their testimonies and peculiarities.

The children of Antipas and Mercy (Slade) Earle were:

412–1. BENJAMIN EARLE, b. Sept. 27, 1761; m. 1st, widow Sarah Bowen; 2d, Content Chace.
413–2. SLADE EARLE, b. Nov. 22, 1764; m. Elizabeth Chace [477–5].
414–3. JONATHAN EARLE, b. Dec. 22, 1767; d. July 25, 1813.
415–4. ABIGAIL EARLE, b. April 7, 1774; m. George Read.
416–5. JOHN EARLE, b. Oct. 13, 1777; m. 1st, Axissarus Cole; 2d, Hannah E. Doty.

Of Jonathan [414–3], Gov. Washburn in his History of Leicester, says, "He was an extensive card manufacturer; owned the place on Mt. Pleasant, Leicester, where N. P. Denny, Esq., afterward lived, and died unmarried; a man of active enterprise and success in business."

He was a member of the board of Selectmen in 1807 and 1808.

The homestead mentioned is on the north side of the road, at the top of the hill, one mile west of the Town Hall, and is now owned and occupied by the brothers Horace A. and Watson Smith.

[195–1]. William[5] Earle (William,[4] Thomas,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Mehitable (Brayton) Earle, b. in $17\frac{19}{20}$ O. S., at Portsmouth, R. I.; m. 1st, Jan. 15, 1741, Sarah (b. April 1, 1725), dau. of Joseph and Sarah (Durfee) Dennis, of Portsmouth, by whom he had two children; 2d, March 6, 1760, widow Catherine (Williams) Lunt, of Taunton, by whom he had one child. It is believed that he d. in Portsmouth.

He was a Justice of the Peace in Portsmouth in 1744.

The children of William Earle were:

417–1. ROBERT EARLE, b. Feb. 26, 1743.
418–2. WILLIAM EARLE, b. Aug. 27, 1747.
419–3. SAMUEL EARLE, b. Oct. 20, 1760.

[196–2]. David[5] Earle (William,[4] Thomas,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Mehitable (Brayton) Earle, b. July 11, 1722, in Portsmouth, R. I.; m. Oct. 23, 1746, Abigail (b. 1729), dau. of John and Abigail (Abbott) Lawton, and lived in Newport, R. I.

Their children were:

420–1. MEHITABLE EARLE, b. July 31, 1748; m. 1st, Oct. 9, 1767, Thomas Townsend; 2d, Nov. 2, 1805, Asa (a Quaker preacher), son of Caleb and Content Russell, of New Bedford, Mass. "She was a very lovely and agreeable woman."
421–2. DAVID EARLE, b. March 28, 1750.
422–3. THOMAS EARLE, b. Nov. 11, 1751; m. March 2, 1775, Elizabeth (b. Oct. 28, 1756), dau. of Philip and Elizabeth (Casey) Wanton, of Newport, R. I.
423–4. JOHN EARLE, b. Oct. 28, 1753; d. young.
424–5. WILLIAM EARLE, b. Sept. 19, 1755.
425–6. SARAH EARLE, b. Sept. 4, 1756.
426–7. ISAAC EARLE, b. Sept. 20, 1757.

427–8. ABIGAIL EARLE, b. Nov. 27, 1758; was living, unm., in 1808, in the old John Earle house, at Bristol ferry. Query: Did she afterwards m. Nicholas Easton in Providence, R. I.?

428–9. JOHN EARLE, b. July 1, 1760.

There is reason for the belief that Abbott Earle, who m. Oct. 30, 1791, Hannah Burr; and Nancy Earle, who m. Sept. 1, 1793, Shubael Cady, all of Providence, R. I., were also children of David and Abigail; and that Abigail, then a widow, was living and "keeping house" in Providence, between 1790 and 1800.

[198–4]. Thomas[5] Earle (William,[4] Thomas,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and Abigail (Abbott) Lawton Earle, b. 12th mo. 21, 1736, O. S., in Portsmouth, R. I.; m. May 14, 1767, Mary Tripp; lived in Portsmouth, and d. about 1810, in Newport, R. I.

Their children were:

429–1. ELIZABETH EARLE; d. unm., in 1857, in Portsmouth, R. I.
430–2. SARAH EARLE; m. 1st, —— Hayden; 2d, James Burrill, of Providence, R. I.
431–3. SUSAN EARLE.
432–4. JOHN EARLE.
433–5. WILLIAM EARLE.
434–6. THOMAS EARLE.
435–7. BENJAMIN EARLE.

[199–5], John[5] Earle (William,[4] Thomas,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of William and widow Abigail (Abbott) Lawton Earle, b. 1st mo. 16, 173$\frac{8}{9}$, O. S., in Portsmouth, R. I.; m. May 8, 1766, Dorcas (d. Dec. 27, 1827), dau. of Jacob and Dorcas Barney, resided in Newport; d. May 20, 1816, in Smithfield, R. I. His children were born in Newport, with the exception of Jacob Barney, who was born in Mendon, Mass.

In the language of a letter written nearly thirty years ago, "John was born a sailor, and cared as little for money, although entirely free from sailors' vices. During the Revolution he sent his family to Mendon, Mass. He was taken by a British cruiser, and wrote to his wife. The letter was opened and read at a public house, and some one who heard its contents was not slow to carry the bad news of his capture to his wife. But he took his ill-luck very philosophically. When the cruiser came alongside, after a long chase, the first question he put was, 'How many feet keel is your brig?' He didn't mind being taken, but he hated to be beat. He was, for a long time before he quit business, captain of a Long Island Sound packet, a rakish-loooking craft now extinct. He was never known to sleep at night going up or down Sound; and in a thick fog he could tell where he was by the lead alone. Sam. Walden, pilot of the Narragansett steamer, was a boy with him, and he said that there are no such pilots now."

In another letter written about the same time, it is stated that he "was universally respected within his sphere of action, which was principally Rhode Island and New York, and loved and admired by all his friends. His sister Phebe [201–7], who was never married, was an inmate of his family as long as he lived; she was much like her brother John, a kind, quiet, excellent woman, who had a care for everybody in preference to herself."

The children of John and Dorcas (Barney) Earle were:

436–1. DORCAS EARLE, b. April 14, 1767; m. Obadiah Williams, Newport, R. I.; d. 1806.

437–2. ABIGAIL EARLE, b. March 29, 1769; m. Jonathan Greene.

438–3. JOHN EARLE, b. Jan. 15, 1771; m. Nov. 2, 1797, Elizabeth (Betsey) Slocum; d. without issue, Nov. 17, 1837, in Newport, R. I.

439–4. EUNICE EARLE, b. March 5, 1774; m. about 1810, Seth Kelly, of Mendon, Mass.; d. Oct. 1, 1857, without issue.

440–5. SARAH EARLE, b. Sept. 9, 1775; m. 1828, Samuel Mott, Brooklyn, N. Y.; d. at Mendon, Mass., without issue.

441–6. ELIZABETH EARLE, b. May 30, 1778; m. Nov. 2, 1797, W. S. Burling, N. Y.

442–7. JACOB BARNEY EARLE, b. Sept. 3, 1780; m. June 13, 1806, Rhoda Cahoone; no issue.

443–8. PHEBE EARLE, b. July 20, 1782; m. George Robinson, Union Springs, N. Y.

"John Earle, Jr. [438–3], was a shipmaster, and then a merchant, at Newport, R. I., until 1813, after which he lived a few years at Union Springs, Cayuga Co., N. Y., and then in Brooklyn; but he died at Newport, when on a visit, and was buried in Friends' burying-ground. He was said to be one of the best sailor-merchants of the age. He was, when in Brooklyn, agent for all the Boston insurance offices, and inspector for the Pacific Insurance Co. of N. Y. He exposed himself, getting off stranded vessels, to the lasting injury of his health. He got a ship off Block Island, and took her into Newport, where he might have got large salvage; but his sense of honor would not permit him to avail himself of it, as the Office had written to him to attend to their interests."

[202–1]. Joshua[5] Earle (Oliver,[4] Thomas,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Oliver and Rebecca (Sherman) Earle, b. in Swanzey, Mass.; m. May 12, 1748, Alice, dau. of Job and Ama (Gardner) Sherman, of Portsmouth, R. I. He lived in Swanzey when married, and afterward in Dartmouth (now Westport), Mass. He and his wife died within a week of each other, he at the age of 70 years and she 68 years.

Their children were:

444–1. MARY EARLE; m. Dec. 13, 1773, Samuel Chace, of Swanzey.
445–2. JOB EARLE; m. Oct. 15, 1780, Huldah Wood (d. Jan. 20, 1816), of Dartmouth. He lived some years, at least, in Westport.
446–3. OLIVER EARLE; d. unmarried.
447–4. WANTON EARLE; m. 1787 (intentions pub. Dec. 29, 1786), Sarah Francis, of Freetown, and lived in Westport, Mass.
448–5. BRIDGET EARLE; d. unmarried.
449–6. REBECCA EARLE; m. Dec. 29, 1793, Daniel Corey, of Westport, Mass.
450–7. SARAH EARLE; m. Nov. 27, 1796, Joshua Tripp, of Westport, Mass.
451–8. ELIZABETH EARLE; m. (intentions pub. June 17, 1793), Benjamin Grover (or Groves), of Tiverton, R. I.
452–9. HANNAH EARLE, b. July 23, 1772; m. John Howard.

[203–2]. Caleb[5] Earle (Oliver,[4] Thomas,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Oliver and Rebecca (Sherman) Earle, b. Jan. 30, 1729, in Swanzey, Mass.; m. 1st (10th mo., 5th, 1745, O. 582–11. JULIA EARLE, b. July 21, 1822.

William Earle [574–3] attended the schools of Providence until he was of age, when he entered the counting-room of William R. Bowers & Co. In 1837 this company failed, and William Earle bought the establishment and took Capt. Lloyd Bowers as partner, who remained with him until 1869. After that date he continued the ship chandlery business alone, at the old stand on Water street, until 1877, when he sold out and took an office on South Main street, next to his residence, the Joseph Tillinghast homestead, at the southwest corner of James street, where he remained until his death. Mr. Earle was genial and social with his friends, but he was eminently a just man, who could be and was trusted, and whose opinions had weight in business circles. He was a member of the R. I. Historical Society, Vice-President of the Marine Society, &c., of the Common Council from 1847 to 1852, and Alderman from 1859 to 1862; he also had the management of several estates.

710–7. JOHN F. EARLE, b. Aug. 8, 1804; m. Chloe Keith (b. June 13, 1807; d. April 1, 1886, in Springfield, Mass.); no issue.

[300–1]. Ralph[6] Earle (Ralph,[5] William,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Ralph and Phebe (Whittemore) Earle, b. May 11, 1751, in Leicester, Mass.; m. about 1773, Sarah Gates; d. Aug. 16, 1801, in Bolton, Conn., the death being recorded in the church records of that town.

The following notice of him is taken from Washburn's History of Leicester:

"Ralph Earle deserves to be remembered as a man of fine genius as a painter. He was the son of Ralph, and a great-grandson* of the first Ralph Earle who settled in Leicester, the ancestor of most of the families which have borne that name in the town.

In Dunlap's work upon the 'History of the Arts of Design in the United States,' is a notice of Mr. Earle as an artist, in which he is spoken of as having painted portraits in Connecticut in 1775; and among his works were 'two full-lengths' of Dr. Dwight, painted in 1777. * * * Mr. Earle executed, from sketches taken upon the spot, four historical paintings, believed to be the first historical paintings ever executed by an American artist; one, the battle of Lexington; one, a view of Concord, with the royal troops destroying the stores; one, the battle of the North Bridge, in Concord; and one, the south part of Lexington, where the first detachment was joined by Lord Percy. These paintings were engraved, and published by Amos Doolittle, of New Haven, Conn. It is certainly no slight distinction to have been the first American historical painter.

Soon after the peace, we find him in England, pursuing his art under the instruction of his countryman, Sir Benjamin West; and such was his success that he was elected a member of the Royal Academy in London. He returned to this country in 1786, and continued to pursue the business of a painter in different parts of

* Washburn says "grandson," which is not correct.

Massachusetts, New York and Connecticut. He left several works that gained him much credit; and among them was a large one, the 'Falls of Niagara,' which was much admired. He painted for Col. Thomas Denny a landscape of much merit, and great fidelity of representation, embracing the beautiful and picturesque view that spreads out towards the east from the mansion-house on the old Denny farm,* so called; which is still preserved and in good condition. His productions were chiefly in the line of portraits, many of which might have formerly been found in Northampton and Springfield. Among his last works of this kind were portraits of Gov. Strong and his family."

Dunlap's opinion of him as an artist is as follows:

"He had considerable merit; a breadth of light and shadow; facility of handling, and truth in likeness."

To this estimate of him it becomes our duty to add the remark of Gov. Washburn, that "his habits unfortunately stood between him and that eminence in his profession which genius had originally placed within his reach."

In an obituary notice of Ralph's son, Capt. John Earle, in the Worcester Palladium of April 30, 1856, it is stated that while in England Ralph "painted the portraits of many of the nobility, and of some of the royal family"; and that his picture of Niagara Falls "was exhibited in all parts of the country, and was then carried to London, where it was in existence but a few years ago."

The above-mentioned landscape taken from the Denny farm is still well preserved, and is in the possession of Christopher C. Denny, of Leicester, who received it from the heirs of Mrs. Lucretia, widow of Thomas Denny, for whom it was painted.

Dunlap's mistake in giving to Ralph some military experience in the early part of the Revolutionary war, can be explained only by the facts that Clark Earle [301–2], the brother of Ralph, "marched to Cambridge" from Paxton, Mass., in Capt. Phinehas Moore's company, in April, 1775; and that Ralph Earle, father of Ralph the artist, held a captain's commission and served during the larger part of the war.

Gov. Washburn's statement (History of Leicester, page 209) that it was Ralph who married in London, is incorrect, as will be seen by our history of his brother James [303–4].

* This Ralph, like his father, was an artist. He was in London improving himself in the art of painting in 1809 and 1810. After his return to America he married a neice of Gen. Andrew Jackson; and, during a considerable part of the presidency of the latter, he (Ralph) was one of the President's household in Washington. He painted a full-length picture of Jackson, which, at the time, was highly commended. He died in New Orleans. His wife lived but a short time after marriage, and died without issue.

Palmer Smyth, of New Jersey, U. S."

Seven years afterwards he came to America on a visit, and subsequently sailed for England, intending to bring his family to the United States; but the vessel first went to Charleston, S. C., where he was attacked by yellow fever and died in August, 1796. His will, of which the following is a copy, is recorded in the Registry at Charleston:—

"In the name of God, amen; I, James Earl, of the city of London, Limner, at present in the city of Charleston, do make this my last will and testament.

FIRST, I direct all my lawful debts to be paid and satisfied. Item. I then give and bequeath all the rest, residue and remainder of my Estate, of what nature and kind soever, to my dear wife Georgiana Caroline Earl now residing in London (at present at No. 54 Newman St.) and I do hereby appoint my said dear wife Executrix and Alexander Jones of Charleston, Merchant, my Executor, of this my will, and do hereby declare this to be my only Will and Testament.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal, in the city of Charleston, this sixteenth day of August, 1796.

(Signed) JAMES EARL. (L. S.)

Signed, sealed, published, pronounced and declared as the last Will and Testament of the Testator, in presence of

DANIEL HOLOWAY.
NATHANIEL JONES.
WILLIAM DABNEY.

Proved before Charles Lining, Esq. O. C. T. D.

August 26, 1796."

Like his brother Ralph, James was a painter, and attained considerable eminence in the art, in both England and America. Soon after his decease "there was a most friendly eulogy of him in a Charleston paper of the time, in which they stated that he was equal to Copley, Savage, Trumbull, West, and other American geniuses of the age, instancing his power of giving 'life to the eye, and expression to every feature.'"

The children of James and Caroline G. P. S. Earle were:

721–1. CLARA EARLE.
722–2. PHEBE EARLE; m. 1st, D. Dighton, military painter to George IV., of England; 2d, Patrick Macintyre. In 1863 they were living at Kilburn, near London.
723–3. AUGUSTUS EARLE, b. 1793.

Augustus inherited the artistic talent, and, perhaps from a better early education, exhibited a much greater power in painting than his father. He was admitted as a student in the Royal Academy, in London, before October, 1807; and some of his pictures were in two of the public exhibitions previous to that date.

In 1832, the Longmans, of London, published a work with the following title: "A Narrative of a Nine Months' Residence in New Zealand, in 1827; together with a Journal of a Residence in Tristan d'Acunha, an Island situated between South America and the Cape of Good Hope. By Augustus Earle, Draughtsman to his Majesty's surveying ship, 'The Beagle.'" The following account of the journeyings of Augustus is extracted from the introduction to the book above mentioned:—

"Although educated as an artist, a love of roving and adventure tempted him, at an early age, to sea. Accordingly, in 1815, through some interest he possessed at the Admiralty, he procured a passage on board a store ship bound to Sicily and Malta, where he had a brother stationed who was a Captain in the navy. In one of the small craft attached to the British flotilla he visited many parts of the Mediterranean, accompanying Lord Exmouth's fleet, in his brother's gunboat, on his Lordship's first expedition against the Barbary States. A peace being concluded with the Bey, he visited the ruins of Carthage, and likewise the remains of the ancient city of Ptolomea, or Lepida, situated in Lybia,—the Bey providing our traveller and his companions with a tent, camels, and a strong guard of Janissaries to protect them against the Arabs. After this he returned to Malta, passed through Sicily and ascended Mount Etna. He next proceeded to Gibraltar, taking a minute survey of that mighty rock, its batteries, caves, and Moorish ruins.

In the summer of 1817 he returned to England, which he quitted in the March following for the United States of America. After rambling through them, which occupied nearly two years, he embarked, February 11, 1820, on board 'The Warrior,' and reached Rio de Janeiro on the 2d of April. In the June following, he visited the coast of Chili; and on the 18th of July he reached Lima, where he remained practising his profession as an artist, till the 10th of December, when he left it, on board 'The Hyperion,' bound to England, in the expectation of meeting a vessel proceeding to Rio. The Hyperion having spoken the 'Anna,' from Stockholm, he was put on board of her and returned to Rio, where he pursued his art with great perseverance and success; and toward the commencement of 1824, having received the most flattering offers of an introduction to Lord Amherst, who had just left England to take upon himself the government of India, Mr. Earle resolved on quitting Rio and proceeding to the Cape of Good Hope, thence intending to take his passage to Calcutta. Wearied, however, with awaiting the arrival of a vessel bound to the Cape, he was enterprising enough, contrary to the advice of all his friends at Rio, to intrust himself on board the 'Duke of Gloucester,' a worn-out Margate hoy, which was proceeding thither with potatoes, laden to the water's edge."

Upon this voyage the vessel was forced to put in at the island of Tristan d'Acunha. Augustus, with one companion, went a short journey into the interior, and when they returned the vessel had left. Augustus was detained in this almost desolate island from the 21st of March to the 29th of November, 1824, when he was taken off by the "Admiral Cockburn," Captain Cooling, commander, bound to Van Dieman's Land. We make one extract from his journal while at Tristan d'Acunha:—

"Today I complete six months' miserable imprisonment on this wretched island, and have no more prospect of getting off than I had the first week that I came on shore. Instead of becoming reconciled to my situation, I think I am lately more and more wretched. Every species of pastime or occupation I could think of or invent, I have exhausted. I sit for hours together watching the horizon, in the faint hope of catching sight of a vessel, and thinking of my friends in England. Previous to the return of Spring, my gun was a source of amusement, though my game, generally speaking, was no better than gulls and various aquatic birds, but now, even that employment is denied me. I go almost every day in pursuit of goats, of which I have taken great numbers, but the intolerable fatigue and risk is almost too much for me."

From Van Dieman's Land he went to New South Wales, and thence, in October, 1827, to New Zealand. Here, in conversation with one of the prominent natives, on the subject of cannibalism, the latter said to him, "The only difference in our laws is, that, for crime, you flog and hang, but we shoot and eat."

He returned to Sidney, New South Wales, where, "after making innumerable sketches, and furnishing Mr. Burford with the original drawings for his panorama recently exhibited in Leicester Square, London, he determined to proceed to India, and accordingly left the coast of New Holland in the 'Rainbow,' commanded by the Hon. Captain Roos. This vessel touched at the Caroline Islands, proceeded to Guam, one of the Ladrones, thence to Manilla, and afterwards to Singapoor, where he was introduced to the 'Resident,' who paid him every attention. The vessel then sailed through the Straits of Malacca to Pulo-Penang, he enriching his portfolio at every resting place."

"At Madras he acquired both fame and money, and during his short stay there executed the original drawings of that presidency which have since been copied and exhibited as a panorama by Messrs. Daniell & Parris. While in the zenith of his celebrity, his health unfortunately declined, and he was advised to leave India with as little delay as possible; and feeling convinced that his life depended on his speedy departure, he immediately went down to Pondicherry, taking thence his passage to England, by way of France, on board 'La Julie,' a trader bound to Bordeaux and laden with a heavy cargo of sugar; but being overtaken by adverse gales, the Captain was compelled to lighten his vessel by throwing overboard the whole of the cargo, and after considerable difficulty made the Mauritius (Isle of France) where, 'La Julie' being condemned, our traveller was obliged to remain until the arrival of the first ship bound for England. This proved to be the free-trader 'Resource,' commanded by Capt. Stodart. During the stay of this vessel at the Mauritius, Mr. Earle executed a series of beautiful panoramic views of that picturesque and interesting island. He arrived safely in this country, with a spirit not at all depressed by the vicissitudes and perils he had gone through, but with an increased and more insatiable desire to visit climes which he had read of, but never seen. An opportunity soon offered, and he unhesitatingly availed himself of it, accepting the situation of draughtsman to His Majesty's ship 'Beagle,' commanded by Capt. Fitzroy, and which has lately (1832) left these shores on a voyage of discovery not likely to terminate under four years."

He died not long afterwards, but when and where we have not learned.

After the birth of the children named below he removed to Vermont.

He was a private in the U. S. Army, in the war of the Revolution. At the battle of Bunker Hill, he was standing on a heap of rails, having been ordered there to watch the enemy's fire, when a cannon ball knocked the rails from under him. As our troops were retreating, he perceived that a British officer was close upon him with uplifted sword. He turned, fired, and instantly killed the officer.

He lived in Edwards, N. Y., but d. May 14, 1877, in Hermon, N. Y.

Writing, in 1863, from Edwards, N. Y., he says, "I was fifteen years old when my father moved to the Black river. We settled in the town of Champion, Jefferson County, about a mile from the river. On the east side of the river was a wild, wooded country. My father made steel traps, and we caught sixty wolves in about four years. My father enjoyed himself very well until my mother died. She left us quite lonely, and I went to Vermont and got my brother Lotan. He had a kind, good wife. I gave all up to him and went for myself. With my trust in God, my faith being well founded, I have prospered very well. I have seven of my sons and daughters living near me and they are doing well."

The children of Guy and Cynthia (Smith) Earle were:

860–1. ELIPHALET S. EARLE, b. March 31, 1816; m. Christine Watson.

867–8. WARREN EARLE, b. Sept. 8, 1835; m. Amorette L. Ranger.

[355–1]. Pliny[6] Earle (Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Sarah (Hunt) Earle, and grandson of Henry W. and Elizabeth (Rice) Hunt, of Leicester, Mass., b. Dec. 17, 1762, in Leicester; m. June 6, 1793, Patience (b. May 9, 1770; d. Nov. 11, 1849), dau. of William and Lydia (Arnold) Buffum, of Smithfield, R. I. She was granddaughter of Joseph and Margaret (Osborne) Buffum; gr.-granddaughter of Benjamin Buffum; gr.-gr.-granddaughter of Caleb and Hannah (Pope) Buffum; and gr.-gr.-gr.-granddaughter of Robert and Tamasin Buffum, who emigrated from Yorkshire, England, and settled in Salem, Mass., about the year 1638. They lived in Leicester, and he d. Nov. 29, 1832.

As has already been seen, Robert Earle, senior [89–9], conveyed, in 1792, his homestead to his grandsons, Pliny and Jonah Earle. The house was at the junction of what are now Mulberry and Earle streets.

Pliny immediately made the place his home, and his grandfather lived in the family until his decease, in 1796. A barn was erected in 1792, ten or twelve rods southwest of the house. In 1793, the house was removed directly across the road (Mulberry street), enlarged, and made the factory in which Pliny Earle & Brothers carried on the manufacture of hand and machine cards.

A larger dwelling was immediately erected upon the old site, the family, meanwhile, making the new barn their temporary home. This house, with some alterations and additions, is still standing. Its framework is a model for strength and durability, and with similar usage will outlast most of the wooden dwelling-houses erected at the present day.

As a combination of circumstances led the subject of this notice into a work of no inconsiderable importance in the introduction of manufactures into the United States, it is proper that some account of that work should be inserted here.

From Washburn's History of Leicester, published in 1826, we make the following extract:—

"Pliny Earle is the great-grandson of Ralph Earle, one of the first settlers of the town, and possesses much of the mechanical ingenuity, in addition to a great fund of general knowledge, which has seemed to characterize those of that name in this town."

"The manufacture of cotton and wool hand-cards * * * was commenced [in Leicester] about the year 1785, by Mr. Edmund Snow; and amongst those most early engaged in its prosecution was Mr. Pliny Earle. (He began it in 1786.) About the year 1790, Mr. Samuel Slater, the venerable originator of cotton factories in the United States, * * having in vain endeavored to procure suitable cards for his machinery in the principal cities of the Union, applied to Mr. Earle. Machine cards had, till then, been made in the manner called by manufacturers 'plain.' A part of the cards used on a machine is called 'filleting,' and this part it was desirable to have made what is termed 'twilled.' For this purpose, Mr. Earle was obliged to prick the whole of the filleting with two needles, inserted into a handle, in the manner of an awl. This process was extremely tedious, but Mr. Earle at length completed his undertaking, and furnished to Mr. Slater the cards by which the first cotton was wrought that was spun by machinery in America. The difficulty with which he accomplished this engagement, led his attention to the invention of a machine with which to prick the leather for cards; and about the year 1797 he accomplished the desired object by inventing the machine now in general use for the manufacture (pricking) of 'twilled' cards."

The principles involved in that machine, the patent for which was not issued until December 6, 1803, formed the basis of all machines for pricking twilled cards for many years, and until those machines were superseded by that remarkable example of human ingenuity, the machine for pricking the leather and cutting and setting the teeth at one process, which is now in general use.

It has hitherto been generally believed, by all persons interested in the subject, that the first experience of Pliny Earle in the manufacture of machine cards was in making those which were ordered by Samuel Slater. This is a mistake. He had made machine card clothing of the only style then known in America, that is, with the teeth set in what is technically called the "plain" form,—and had covered machines with it, before the arrival of Samuel Slater in the United States.

Slater landed in New York November 11, 1789. One week prior to this, on the fourth of the same month, Almy & Brown, of Providence, R. I., with whom Slater was afterwards associated, wrote to Pliny Earle desiring that he should cover a carding machine for them, and mentioning a similar work which he had previously done for a company in Worcester. For a verbatim copy of this letter see Appendix.

The business firm, Pliny Earle & Brothers, which consisted of the eldest three brothers, Pliny, Jonah and Silas Earle, was formed in 1791, and their business soon became one of the most extensive of its kind in the United States. In the manufacture of machine card clothing it was probably unequalled. Prior to the year 1800, they sent an agent to South Carolina, there to conduct the sale of hand-cards for cotton, which were largely used upon the plantations of the southern States. Some of these cards were transported by horse-teams which took them at the factory and delivered them in Charleston.

In 1802 they extended their business by adding to it the building of machines for carding both cotton and wool. In 1804 upon some stream in each of several towns in Worcester County and on one in Rhode Island, they placed wool-carding machines for the accommodation of the farmers in the neighborhood, whose home-raised wool had previously been mostly carded by hand in the family. The following handbill was issued by them at this time:—

Elegant Machinery for Carding Wool by Water.

By the united efforts of the best English and American Artisans,

PLINY EARLE, & BROTHERS,

HAVE erected WOOL CARDING MACHINES, which are allowed by the best judges, to exceed any thing of the kind in America. They have placed one set at DAVID WADSWORTH'S Waterworks, a little South of the Meetinghouse, in Grafton; one set at the Mills of ELEAZAR BALL, in Rutland; one set at *Western; one Machine at LUKE JILLSON'S Mills in Cumberland, state of Rhode-Island. The above Machines are on the most improved, and best approved construction. They are all in actual operation, and are performing work in the neatest and best manner, and are under the inspection and general direction of an English Manufacturer, who has had more than thirty years experience; they therefore flatter themselves that they shall give general satisfaction to those who favor them with wool to card.

Leicester, 8th Mo. 28, 1804.

With Paul Whitin and others they were joint owners of the cotton factory in Northbridge, Mass., which was the nucleus from which have sprung Whitinsville and all its accessories.

The business of the firm flourished during the war with England. The prices of cards were greatly enhanced and yielded a large profit. But the cost of the raw material was likewise much greater than before. For machine card wire they were obliged at one time to pay from two to two and a half dollars per pound. The market price of a much better article is now from twelve to fifteen cents per pound.

In 1815, the unexpected declaration of peace found the company with a very large stock of raw material on hand. Prices immediately fell enormously, and the demand for cards almost entirely ceased, so that this stock, when manufactured, paid but little more than the interest upon its cost, from the time of purchase to the time of sale. The company consequently became embarrassed, financially, and was soon afterwards practically dissolved, although there was no formal announcement of its dissolution.

Pliny Earle retained the business, and continued in it until his decease in 1832, his son William B. Earle being his principal agent and manager from and after 1819. In 1824 his cutting-machines were run by steam, and in 1827 the machinery was removed to "New Boston," in the northwest part of Rutland, where it was run by water-power.

He engaged, largely for the time, in the wool-growing business which attracted much practical attention during the first quarter of this century, and was promoted by the first considerable importation of merino sheep. He once sold a ram lamb, six months old, for a yoke of oxen and one hundred dollars; and in 1820 his flock of sheep numbered over two hundred.

He also attempted the cultivation of silk. About the time of his marriage he raised mulberry trees, between sixty and seventy of which were standing upon the farm at the time of his death. From these, in 1827, the homestead derived the name "Mulberry Grove"; and hence, also, the name (Mulberry street) of the road which traverses the farm from north to south. In one or two of the earliest years of the century he made a quantity of silk, but it did not pay the cost of culture.

His orchard of fruit was by far the most extensive in the town at that time. Of grafted apples, both winter and summer, he had a good variety; of pears and cherries an abundance, and of several varieties; and of peaches, at one time, from 1800 to 1810, a very prolific orchard; and these were supplemented by plums, apricots and nectarines.

In religious belief he lived and died a conscientious and consistent

Quaker, free from bigotry, and without unchristian prejudice against any man because of his association with some other denomination. He took but little part in the church business of the Society, but his house was ever open to its members, and he took pleasure in seeing it filled to the extent of its accommodations at the time of the "monthly" and "quarterly meetings."

In politics he was a federalist, among the staunchest of the staunch, but he rarely attended political gatherings; and in the town-meetings he used his right of franchise by casting his vote, but always refused to accept a public office.

In the second edition (1860) of his history, Gov. Washburn says, in allusion to him: "He was a man of much intelligence. His wife was a woman of strong and cultivated intellect, and their house was the seat of a generous hospitality."

The children of Pliny and Patience (Buffum) Earle were:

868–1. JOHN MILTON EARLE, b. April 13, 1794; m. Sarah Hussey.
869–2. THOMAS EARLE, b. April 21, 1796; m. Mary Hussey.
870–3. LYDIA EARLE, b. March 24, 1798; m. Anthony Chase.
871–4. SARAH EARLE, b. April 8, 1800; m. Aug. 3, 1831, Charles Hadwen; d. Oct., 1834; without issue.
872–5. WILLIAM B. EARLE, b. Dec. 20, 1802; m. Harriet Brown.
873–6. LUCY EARLE, b. May 7, 1805; d. unm., Feb. 15, 1887.
874–7. ELIZA EARLE, b. June 8, 1807; m. William E. Hacker.
875–8. PLINY EARLE, b. Dec. 31, 1809.
876–9. JONAH EARLE, b. Nov. 16, 1813; d. unm., March 25, 1857.

On the 15th of May, 1827, SARAH EARLE [871–4], who had much native energy of character, and who for some years had been a teacher in the Friends' School at Providence, R. I., opened a boarding school for young women at her father's homestead. It met with unexpected success, and in a very short time the Mulberry Grove Boarding School had become widely known, and had established a reputation for its very thorough instruction in the useful branches of education, and for the excellence of its pupils as scholars in the English language. French was the only language other than English, and painting by theorems, in water-colors, the only then so-called "ornamental" branch that found a place in the curriculum of instruction.

Pupils came from nearly all parts of Massachusetts, as well as from several of the neighboring States, and before 1831, when the Principal married Charles Hadwen, then of Providence, R. I., and left her sister Eliza as her successor, the number was limited only by the extent of accommodations. The school was continued with unabated success until 1839, when it was closed and its Principal removed to Philadelphia, Pa.

Sarah Earle was an active and prominent member of the "Leicester Female Literary Society," an association which existed during nearly the whole of the first quarter of the present century, and included several young ladies of superior intellectual powers. A specimen of her contributions to the literary work of the society may be seen in the Appendix.

WILLIAM B. EARLE [872–5], as has been mentioned, was the immediate manager of his father's card business during the last twelve or thirteen years of the life of the latter. He afterwards continued the business, in his father's name, until the decease of his mother, in 1849. Inheriting his father's mechanical ingenuity he perceived, at an early period, that improvements might be made in the Whittemore machine for pricking and setting cards; and soon after the patent expired, and even before his father's death, he engaged in the manufacture of them. He completed his first one in 1829; his second, with further improvements, in 1832; and in 1837 he placed one in the exhibition of the Massachusetts Charitable Association in Boston, for which a silver medal was awarded to him. In subsequent years he built a considerable number of them, "with still later improvements and modifications." This business also was suspended in 1849. Most of his machines went into the manufactory of T. K. Earle & Co., who, in 1860, gave their maker the following testimonial:—

"WORCESTER, 5th Mo., 18, 1860.

WILLIAM B. EARLE: * * * * * The twenty years of your life that have been devoted to the development of the Card Setting Machine, have done more to bring it to perfection than the labors of all others, and you should now be reaping the reward of your works, that have done so much to advance the manufacturing interests of the country.

Truly yours,
T. K. EARLE & CO."

In 1886, according to an article in the Massachusetts Spy, "a large number" of the machines were still in use. "They are pronounced," continues that article, "equal to any in the world, and by many competent judges from past experience and knowledge are considered the best yet used."

The card pricking and setting machine and the machine for making lace, have been declared to be the two greatest triumphs of human ingenuity. A gentleman, seeing, for the first time, one of the card machines in operation, watched, in silent admiration, its marvellous movements, and at length exclaimed, "Why! it thinks!" And it is said that when the question of the extension of the Whittemore patent was before Congress, John Randolph, of Roanoke, advocated that extension in his own vigorous language. "Yes, I would renew it to all eternity, for it is the only machine which ever had a soul." As an "expert" in that machine, William B. Earle, while he may have had equals, has had no superior. He still lives at the age of 84 years, during the last thirty of which he has been blind as a consequence of a severe ophthalmia.

His history furnishes a somewhat rare example of physical courage and endurance of pain. At the age of 14 years an abscess—the so-called "fever-sore"—formed in his left arm, and troubled him about thirty years. The use of the arm was permanently impaired. The bone became involved in the disease, was partially destroyed, and at length replaced by a new one, the remnant of the old one still remaining as a source of irritation. He consulted a surgeon in regard to an operation for its removal, but the advice which he received conflicted with the interests of his business, and was not followed. One day at his factory, when the arm was unusually troublesome, he put a keen edge upon his large pocket knife, called together his workmen to be witnesses of his surgical skill, sat coolly down, plunged the knife to the bone a little below the shoulder, laid the bone bare by a cut nearly six inches long, and took out the old bone, the largest piece of which was nearly four inches in length. The arm was then dressed, healed favorably and soon, without taking him even for a day from his business, and has never since troubled him, except by the limited power of motion which had become established before the operation.

PLINY EARLE, Jr. [875-8], received his last literary education in 1827, at the Friends' School in Providence, R. I., where he served as an assistant teacher during the winter of 1828-29. Early in 1831 he was again appointed to that position, where he passed through the several grades of assistant, and in 1835 was promoted to the office of Principal.

He had already begun the study of medicine, under the direction of Dr. Usher Parsons, of Providence, who was one of the surgeons of the American fleet at the battle of Lake Erie, and, in pursuance of his professional object, he resigned his office at the school in October of the year last mentioned and entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania. He was graduated M. D. in the spring of 1837, and immediately went to Europe where he remained two years — one in the medical school and the hospitals of Paris, and the other in a tour of both professional and general observation, in which he visited various institutions for the insane from England to Turkey.

Upon his return, in 1839, he opened an office in Philadelphia; published a pamphlet entitled "A Visit to Thirteen Asylums for the Insane in Europe," and, in the spring of 1840, was elected resident physician of the Friends' Asylum for the Insane, near Frankford, now a part of the aforesaid city. In 1844, he was appointed medical superintendent of the Bloomingdale Asylum for the Insane, in the city of New York. In 1849, he again went to Europe, and visited thirty-four institutions for the insane, in England, Belgium, France and Germany. From material then collected, he afterwards published a book with the title, "Institutions for the Insane in Prussia, Austria and Germany." In 1853, he was elected as one of the visiting physicians of the New York City Lunatic Asylum, on Blackwell's Island. Two years afterwards, his health having become unstable, he withdrew from professional practice and passed some years in his native town at the old homestead of his grandfather. In the winter of 1862–63, and again in that of 1863–64, he assisted in the care of the insane soldiers of the army and the navy at the Government Hospital for the Insane, near Washington, D. C., an institution then under the superintendence of his friend and former pupil, Dr. Charles H. Nichols.

On the 2d of July, 1864, the Trustees of the State Lunatic Hospital at Northampton, Mass., appointed him to the office of Superintendent of that institution, a position which he held until October 1, 1885, a period of twenty-two years and three months. Upon his resignation the Trustees of the Hospital passed a series of resolutions, the last of which is as follows:—

"Resolved, That the Trustees indulge the hope that Dr. Earle will continue to make his home in this institution, that they may continue to profit by his counsels; and they will provide that his rooms shall always be open and ready for his use."

Hitherto, consequently, the hospital has been his home, but he has passed the summer months in the neighborhood of his boyhood, in Leicester.

In 1871 he went a third time to Europe, and visited forty-six hospitals and asylums for the insane in Ireland, Austria, Italy and the intervening countries. More than one hundred and forty institutions of that kind, in America and Europe, have come under his personal observation.

In the winter of 1840–41, while at the Frankford asylum, he delivered before the patients a course of lectures on natural philosophy, illustrated by experiments in pneumatics and electricity. This was the first known attempt to address an audience of the insane in any discourse other than a sermon, and has led to that system of entertainments for the patients now considered indispensable in a first class hospital. In the official year 1866–67, at the Northampton Hospital, to assemblies including an average of over two hundred and fifty of the patients, he gave a series of six lectures on diseases of the brain accompanied by mental derangement, — the first and apparently only time that such an audience ever listened to discourses upon their own malady. In this instance they were favorably received, and they would have been repeated in subsequent years, had the want of the necessary leisure from other duties not prevented.

He has published many articles upon insanity and other subjects, most of them in the "Journal of Insanity," and the "American Journal of the Medical Sciences," and some of them have been issued in book or pamphlet form. His paper on "The Inability to Distinguish Colors" was printed many years prior to the publication of the valuable work on that subject by Dr. B. Joy Jeffries. His last book, published by the Lippincott Company, of Philadelphia, and entitled "The Curability of Insanity," was mostly taken from his annual reports of the hospital at Northampton, of which he wrote twenty-two. A reviewer of it says: "This book may mark an epoch in the literature of insanity; since it has changed the whole front of that literature, and set in motion investigating forces which will carry out its main doctrine into many useful details, upon which the veteran author has not dwelt."

He was one of the original members and founders of the American Medical Association, the Association of Medical Superintendents of American Institutions for the Insane, the New York Academy of Medicine, and the New England Psychological Society. He was the first president of the association last mentioned, and president of the Association of Superintendents in 1884–85. He is a member of various other societies.

In 1863 he was appointed Professor of Materia Medica and Psychology in the Berkshire Medical Institute, at Pittsfield, Mass., but, after delivering one course of lectures, resigned the office in consequence of his appointment to the Northampton hospital.

He was one of the medical experts summoned to the trial of Charles J. Guiteau, for the murder of President Garfield. After an attendance of one week his health gave way and he was obliged to leave; but he approved, and still approves, the verdict which held the prisoner responsible for the homicide.

[356–2]. Jonah[6] Earle (Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Sarah (Hunt) Earle, b. Aug. 10, 1765, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Elizabeth (d. Nov. 5, 1854), dau. of Amos Southgate, of Leicester; d. Jan. 21, 1846.

He learned the trade of cabinet-maker, and about 1789 went to New York city to find employment. While there he had the small-pox, having been inoculated for it. When his brother Pliny engaged to make the card clothing for Samuel Slater, he returned, joined him in the work, and thenceforward was one of the firm of Pliny Earle & Brothers during its whole existence. His mechanical ingenuity and skill were not inferior to those of his brother Pliny, and when, in 1802, the manufacture of carding-machines was added to the original business, he took charge of that department.

He owned, lived and died upon the farm which had belonged to Nathaniel Potter, one of the earliest settlers of Leicester. It is now the site of Mannville, and his dwelling-house, remodelled, is the boarding-house of that village, and stands in the northeast corner of Earle and Mannville streets. The factory in which the carding-machines were made was on the south side of the road, ten or fifteen rods southeast of his residence. It has been converted into a dwelling-house.

He was a member of the Society of Friends, remarkably quiet and unobtrusive in his manners; intelligent and of sound judgment, and, as Gov. Washburn says, "a man of great integrity and benevolence." He was a member of the Board of Selectmen from 1815 to 1818, inclusive.

The children of Jonah and Elizabeth (Southgate) Earle were:

877–1. JOHN P. EARLE, b. Nov. 11, 1795; m. 1st, Susan Anthony; 2d, Mary W. Stratton; 3d, Betsey Wheeler.
878–2. NATHANIEL P. EARLE, b. 1797; d. in infancy.
879–3. NATHANIEL P. EARLE, b. April 17, 1798; m. Rachel A. Howard.
880–4. AMOS S. EARLE, b. April 22, 1800; m. Hannah W. Carpenter.
881–5. REBECCA P. EARLE, b. May 20, 1802; m. Joseph Anthony.

[357–3]. Silas[6] Earle (Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Sarah (Hunt) Earle, b. May 26, 1767, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Nov. 6, 1794, Rachel (b. July 17, 1774; d. Dec. 17, 1851), dau. of Elisha and Anna (Read) Thornton, of Smithfield, R. I.; d. Nov. 26, 1842, in Leicester.

He was one of the original members of the firm of Pliny Earle & Brothers, but withdrew from it many years before it was dissolved, and, establishing himself in the same business, prosecuted it extensively and successfully until his decease. During the last twelve or fifteen years of his life his card-setting machines were run by horse-power. Soon after his death, his son Timothy sold all the machinery of the establishment to his cousin Timothy K. Earle and Reuben Randall, who pursued the business a very short time, under the firm name of T. K. Earle & Co., when Timothy Earle repurchased the interest of Randall. The firm was changed to Timothy Earle & Co. and so continued for a brief period, until Timothy Earle sold his interest to Edward Earle, the half-brother of Timothy K. The former name, T. K. Earle & Co., was then resumed, and was continued until 1880, when the establishment became the property of a joint stock company under the title of "The T. K. Earle Manufacturing Company." After Edward Earle bought Timothy Earle's interest, the business was continued for a short period in the Silas Earle factory at Leicester, and then removed to Worcester.

Silas Earle's homestead was the farm on Marshall street, in Leicester, next east of the Town farm. It is now the property of Thomas Southwick. The dwelling-house was built by Silas Earle, in 1806.

He was a prominent and active member of the Society of Friends. He was for many years a director in the Leicester Bank, and for several years its president. In the year 1835 he represented the town in the lower house of the State Legislature.

In the language of Washburn's History of Leicester, he "was highly esteemed and respected in the town."

The children of Silas and Rachel (Thornton) Earle were:

882– 1. HANNAH EARLE,* b. March 16, 1796; m. William Keese, of Au Sable, N. Y.; no issue.

883– 2. ANNA EARLE, b. Dec. 26, 1797; m. Harvey Chace;† d. Dec. 27, 1881, in Valley Falls, R. I.; 2 ch., d. young.

884– 3. GEORGE EARLE, b. Jan. 17, 1800; m. 1st, May 28, 1822, Elvira Earle [775–6]; 2d, Nov. 11, 1824, Narcissa Earle [910–2]; d. March 23, 1827; issue, 1 son, George, b. 1826; d. Sept. 25, 1826.

885– 4. MARY EARLE, b. Feb. 9, 1802; d. unm., 1835.

886– 5. ELISHA EARLE, b. April 18, 1804; d. unm., Oct. 9, 1827.

887– 6. ROBERT EARLE, b. May 18, 1806; m. 1830, Anna Maria Brown, of Salem, Mass.; d. May 27, 1886, in New Bedford, Mass.; no issue.

888– 7. RACHEL EARLE, b. Aug. 11, 1808; d. unm., 1836.

889– 8. SILAS EARLE, b. March 29, 1811; d. unm., 1833.

890– 9. STEPHEN EARLE, b. April 21, 1813; d. unm., at sea, when returning from Europe, in 1856.

*The following obituary notice is taken from the Friends' Review, published in Philadelphia, Pa.:—

"Died, on the 28th of 12th mo., 1859, Hannah E. [882–1], wife of William Keese, of Keeseville, Clinton Co., N. Y., in the 64th year of her age; a useful member of Peru monthly meeting of Friends, having for many years acceptably filled the station of Elder, and other important and responsible duties in the Church. Of a kind and benevolent disposition, and imbued in a remarkable manner with the Christian virtue of preferring others to herself, those in suffering, or in want, always found in her a kind and sympathizing friend."

† Harvey Chace and his brother Samuel were the proprietors of the extensive cotton manufactories in Valley Falls.

ROBERT EARLE,

OF NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

891–10. PHEBE EARLE, b. Feb. 22, 1816; d. July, 1817.
892–11. TIMOTHY EARLE, b. Aug. 14, 1820; m. 1st, Ann Newton; 2d, Phebe Varney.

ROBERT EARLE [887–6], having completed his school education at Leicester Academy, at the age of about eighteen years, immediately began to take an active part in the management of his father's business. His natural predilections and his taste were in the direction of mercantile rather than literary pursuits, and his energy of character and promptness and vigor of action gave early promise of ultimate success. He soon took charge of the out-of-doors part of the business, or that which required travel, while his father, giving him instructions therein, remained chiefly at home conducting the practical processes of the factory.

In this way Robert was not long in making the acquaintance of merchants in the larger cities, particularly New York and Philadelphia, and through them, extending his knowledge and enlarging his ideas of trade, as it was at that time developing in the rapidly expanding States.

Not long after the attainment of his majority, having resolved not to pursue the manufacture in which his father was successfully engaged, he went to Worcester and opened a store for the wholesale and retail trade in flour, at the depot of the Blackstone Canal on Central street. A good business was soon established, and, expanding from year to year, at length became so extensive that he removed it t Boston where were greater facilities for its prosecution. He trav lled, from time to time, through the Western States, establishing an acquaintance and a trade with the flour manufacturers, in that com paratively early period of the business which has since grown to such immense proportions, and become one of the leading interests of the country. His business, like that of nearly every individual eng ed in any one of the many departments of manufacture, trade and commerce, had its fluctuations, but, upon the whole, was a successful pecuniary enterprise; and at an early period in life, he had acquired what was regarded as a competence. He was not ambitious for what is now called a very large estate; and he had the wisdom to manage his acquisitions with safety, rather than to attempt any of those extensive and hazardous enterprises which are liable to terminate in financial ruin to him who has the hardihood to undertake them.

After his removal from Boston, he was at one period associated with his brother-in-law, William A. Brown, in the wholesale flour trade in New York City; but then and ever after he regarded the accumulation of wealth, beyond a reasonable competence, as of secondary importance to the preservation of health, and to that comparative leisure which permits the gratification of one's tastes, and the enlargement of one's knowledge of men and manners in various parts of the world. At two different times, accompanied by his wife, he passed some years in Europe, once extending his journey as far eastward as St. Petersburg, Cairo and Jerusalem.

He resided, at different periods of his life, in Brooklyn, N. Y.; in Philadelphia, Pa.; in the interior of Northeastern Pennsylvania; and at a pleasant country-seat overlooking the Hudson river not far from West Point, N. Y.; but during the last twenty or twenty-five years his home was in the northern suburbs of the city of New Bedford, Mass. Here he died, and here his widow still lives.

[360–6]. Henry[6] Earle (Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Sarah (Hunt) Earle, b. March 13, 1774, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1st, Jan. 4, 1795, Martha Aldrich, of Northbridge, Mass.; issue, 1 ch.; 2d, Miriam Fry (b. Jan. 12, 1771; d. Oct. 14, 1814), of Bolton, Mass.; issue, 6 ch.; 3d, in 1821, Ruth (Keese) Earle, widow of Timothy Earle [362–8]; issue, 4 ch.; d. Nov. 8, 1837, in Leicester, Mass. His widow resided for some years before her decease in Worcester, Mass.

Like all of his brothers, Henry was engaged for some years in the card making business, but he was not a member of the firm of Pliny Earle & Brothers, nor did he manufacture any machine card clothing. He owned a farm on Marshall street, about half a mile east of that of his brother Silas, and built upon it, about 1808, a dwelling-house of nearly the same size and internal architecture as that of the said brother. Being unsuccessful in his business this homestead passed out of his hands soon after the war of 1812–15, and not far from 1850, one-half of the house was taken down and removed to Worcester. The homestead now belongs to the estate of the late Elizabeth Southwick. After Henry's marriage with the widow of his younger brother, Timothy, he lived with her upon the homestead estate left by her first husband. He belonged to the Friends' religious society, and sometimes "appeared in the ministry."

The children of Henry Earle were:

909– 1. HOMER EARLE, b. May 15, 1795.
910– 2. NARCISSA EARLE, b. May 3, 1800; m. 1st, George Earle [884–3]; 2d, John Mann.

H., where she d. April 23, 1847; no issue.

Enoch and Lydia (Earle) Breed had the superintending charge of the Friends' Boarding School at Providence, R. I., from 1824 to 1835, and again in a part of 1836 and 1837. He was an eminently honest and conscientious man, and she sometimes "appeared in the ministry" at the meetings for worship of the religious society with which they were connected.

The children of John and Lydia (Earle) Fry were:

920–1. HANNAH FRY, b. June 3, 1799; m. Sept. 21, 1820, Peletiah Gove; d. March 21, 1847.

Charles R. Tucker was extensively and successfully engaged in the whale fishery and oil business.

[362–8]. Timothy[6] Earle (Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Robert and Sarah (Hunt) Earle, b. March 2, 1778, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Feb. 6, 1806, Ruth Keese (b. March 13, 1785; d. March 8, 1855, in Worcester, Mass.), dau. of Richard Keese, of Peru, now Au Sable, N. Y.; d. March 23, 1819, in Leicester. His widow m. his brother Henry [360–6].

Timothy Earle, the youngest of the five brothers, assumed the support, during life, of his father and mother, in consideration of the homestead—now called Earle Ridge—upon which they lived; and this was his residence during his comparatively short but active life. He died of an acute brain disease, at the age of forty-one years. Early in life he established a manufactory of cotton and wool hand-cards. With less mechanical ingenuity than some of his brothers, he had great enterprise and business talent. With these elements of success, and a cautious avoidance of too large purchases of raw material during the high prices of the war of 1812, he amassed a respectable fortune for the time and place in which he lived. As mentioned on a foregoing page, he erected in 1815, a grist-mill and saw-mill, directly south of the Friends' cemetery, and at a distance from it of forty or fifty rods. The mill was taken down in 1865.

Beside his homestead, he owned, at the time of his decease, the farm next south, upon which was the residence of his great-grandfather Ralph, and the one at the head of the Lynde reservoir. He had nearly completed a large, new residence, which was soon afterward occupied by his widow. More than half of this house has been removed, and the part now remaining is owned and occupied by Frank C. Bauer.

Timothy retained his membership of the Society of Friends until his decease.

The children of Timothy and Ruth (Keese) Earle were:

925–1. ANNA K. EARLE, b. Oct. 12, 1806; m. Oct. 6, 1830, Samuel H. Colton, of Worcester, Mass.; d. March 28, 1842; issue, 1 son, Samuel, who d. in early infancy.

*Veranus was, in 1862, the Captain of a Templeton company of volunteers, engaged in the suppression of the rebellion. In 1886, he was on the island of Jamaica (W. I.) engaged in the collection of specimens of natural history.

He went to Brattleboro in 1787 and was one of the early settlers of the west part of the town. He bought the farm owned in 1886 by Mellen Goodenough, and lived there in an old log house until 1793, when he built the frame house which is occupied by the present owner. He was a very hard-working man. In the latter years of his life he partially lost the use of his limbs so that he walked with a long staff, but so anxious was he to work that he had leather fastened to his pantaloons so that he could weed the garden working on his knees. He lived and died upon the farm where he settled, and where his son Samuel afterward lived.

I.

John Howard lived for a few years at Pittstown, N. Y., and then six or more at Addison, Vt., as a farmer; went to Burlington in 1812, and established the Howard Hotel which he kept for the next thirty-five years of his life. No man was more prompt, or would go farther, to do a kindly act to a neighbor or any person in distress than "Uncle John" as he was familiarly and affectionately called by the many who knew his good qualities. His wife was a very estimable lady, and lived to the age of 93 years, retaining to a remarkable degree her faculties of mind and body. She died in 1865, in Burlington, bearing to her grave the love and esteem of all who knew her.—[Child's Chittenden Co. Directory.

Their children, who, through their mother, were gr.-gr.-gr.-grandchildren of Roger Williams, were:

1062–5. JOHN PURPLE HOWARD, b. June 3, 1814; d. unm., Oct. 10, 1885, in London, Eng.

1063–6. CATHERINE MARIA HOWARD, b. Nov. 3, 1817; m. June 21, 1842, Amos C. Spear, of Burlington.

The following obituary notice of JOHN PURPLE HOWARD [1062–5], is taken from the Burlington Free Press of Oct. 13, 1885:

"Our community will share the sorrow with which we chronicle the death of Mr. John P. Howard, which took place on Saturday last in England. It was announced to his relatives in this city, yesterday, by a despatch cabled from London. * * * He was born in Burlington and spent his boyhood here. At an early age he accompanied his brother Daniel to Troy, N. Y., and afterwards to New York city, where the brothers established first the old Exchange Hotel in Broad street; then the Howard Hotel on the corner of Broadway and Maiden Lane, which still bears the name of the Howard House, and then the Irving House. Retiring from the hotel business with a handsome fortune, Mr. Howard devoted himself thenceforward for a number of years to the care of his property and to seeking health, information and pleasure in travel throughout his own and many foreign countries. He was a quick and keen observer, had a retentive memory, and acquired a fund of information of men and things, which made him an exceedingly interesting companion. Some six or seven years ago, while on his way from London to Paris, he had an apoplectic attack, under which he nearly sank at the time. Under able medical treatment and the attentive care of his niece, Mrs. Evans of Paris, he slowly rallied; but never fully recovered. Returning to this country he spent a good deal of his time in this city, in New York, and of late at Englewood, N. J., with frequent trips to the seaside, to the Pacific coast, and to Europe, as the condition of his health required. He returned to this city from the coast of Maine, about the first of September, a year ago, making his last visit here during the State fair of 1884. Going thence to Englewood he had an ill turn which alarmed him, and by the advice of his physician, who recommended a sea voyage, he suddenly decided to go to Europe. He sailed from Boston in September, and spent the winter in Nice. There he had an attack of diphtheria, which threatened to prove fatal. He recovered, however, sufficiently to go to England, where he spent the summer at Folkstone, the Isle of Wight and Bath. He improved somewhat in health, and hoped to return home during this month; but remained feeble; and those best informed of his condition entertained grave doubts of his being able to cross the water again.

Some years ago Mr. Howard made evident his determination to be in part his own executor, by disposing of a portion of his ample fortune in public beneficences, and to make his native place his chief beneficiary. Since then he has given in public gifts over $260,000 for educational, charitable and religious purposes in Burlington. Prominent among these are the gift of $50,000 in money to the University, the rebuilding of the main University building and new Medical college, at a cost of $65,000, and the statue of Lafayette and fountain in the college park—these gifts to the University aggregating about $133,000; the Howard Opera house and block costing $100,000 given to the Home for Destitue Children; and the new chapel and rectory of St. Paul's church, costing $20,000. Adding minor gifts (such as the City park fountain, the gateways to Lake View cemetery and Howard park) and charities Mr. Howard's beneficences in Burlington in the last ten years must exceed $275,000. He gave frequently and generously also, in private charities. He took great pleasure in all these gifts, and he had in contemplation others, as that of a new gymnasium for the University and a fund for a diocesan school for girls, for which it is not unlikely that he may have made provision by will. He probably leaves an estate of not less than a million dollars. His surviving relations are his elder sister, Miss Louisa Howard, his younger sister, Mrs. A. C. Spear, and his nieces, Mrs. Julia Spear and Mrs. Theodore Evans. He never married. * * * *

As the citizens of Burlington will doubtless take a suitable occasion to do honor to the memory of our city's most generous benefactor, we need not add to this hasty sketch, any words of praise. His good deeds praise him. His name is on every lip with expressions of gratitude and honor;—and he will long be held in grateful memory by the people of Burlington and of Vermont."

His remains were interred, with appropriate ceremonies, in the Lake View cemetery, at Burlington.

ROBERT EARL [1221-4] resides in Herkimer, N. Y., and is one of the most eminent lawyers of that State. He was graduated at Union College, Schenectady, in 1845. He studied law under his brother Samuel; was admitted to practice in 1848, and associated himself with his brother in a copartnership which continued over twenty years.

In 1855 he was elected, for a term of four years, County Judge and Surrogate of the County of Herkimer. An adverse political majority prevented his re-election to that office, and he continued to practice his profession. He was elected in 1869 Judge of the Court of Appeals, the highest court of the State; and by appointment and re-election has been retained in that position to the present time, while his current term of service will not expire until January 1, 1891. He has already served a longer period than any other judge of that court.

He received the degree of LL.D. from Union College in 1874, and from Columbia College, New York, in 1887.

(b. Aug. 11, 1837), dau. of John R. and Rebecca (Maxwell) Wheaton, of Warren, R. I.; issue, 4 ch.; and lives in Chicago, Ill.

HOMER EARLE SARGENT [1467–3] passed his minority on the paternal homestead in Leicester, assisting upon the farm and acquiring his education in the district school and the academy. Upon the attainment of his majority, guided by a predilection for employment in the railroad interest, he took in 1843, the position of clerk to the agent at the State Line station, on the Western—now Boston & Albany—road. As a point from which to estimate the marvellous rapidity of development of intercommunication and traffic, between the Atlantic coast and the Western States, he relates that, during four months of the winter of 1843–44, the Hudson river being closed, all the travel and the transportation of merchandise from New York to the West was by the way of Bridgeport and the State Line station; and that it was all performed by one passenger train and one freight train daily!

In April, 1844, he returned to his father's farm, but in 1845 entered the employ of the Boston & Worcester Railroad, and was with that company thirteen years; first as station agent at Millbury, then in the same capacity at Worcester, and lastly, for six years, as general freight agent at Boston. While in the position last mentioned he formulated and put in practice the first through tariff sheet for the transportation of merchandise between Boston and the Mississippi river. The preparation of this required of him a journey to the West, and a personal conference with the president, the superintendent or the general manager of each railroad forming a part of the route. The tariff amounted to two dollars and forty-five cents for one hundred pounds, from Boston to St. Louis. The through bill-of-lading system now in general use is but the development of this original arrangement.

In 1858 he was called into the employ of the Michigan Central Railroad Company where he remained sixteen years,—the first half of the period as general freight agent and general agent at Chicago, and the last half as general superintendent and general manager. During this period he became one of the incorporators, and for several years a director of the Pullman Palace Car Company; and was largely instrumental in securing the first Pullman sleeping-car service eastward, from Chicago to Rochester, New York.

"The friends of Mr. Sargent," says the History of Chicago, "count among the many prominent efforts of his life none greater than the organization of the Union Stock Yards of this city, the success of which was mainly due to his initial labor." It appears that he first indicated the most suitable place for the yards. He was chairman of the committee which purchased the land—320 acres for $100,000—"it is now worth a score of millions"—a director of The Union Stock Yards and Transit Company, and a "prime mover in the management of the Stock Yards until a few years ago, when he gave way to younger men."

"After leaving the Michigan Central Mr. Sargent was offered the general management of the Northern Pacific Railroad, in 1877. He at first declined, but, later in the year, was prevailed upon to accept the position, which he held until 1881, when he tendered his resignation."

The Fargo and Southern Railroad, between Fargo, Dakota, and Ortonville, Minnesota, a distance of 120 miles, had been begun, but only thirty-five miles of it graded, when, in 1883, he became interested in the company and was elected as its president. He prosecuted the work with such energy that in less than ten months the entire line was finished and ready for operation. This road has been of great benefit to Fargo. The Argus, a newspaper of that city, says: "The people of North Dakota know Mr. Sargent well. The people of Fargo have a right to claim him one of her greatest benefactors. * * * The Fargo & Southern owes its great success to his taking hold and engineering its financial operations and securing its completion."

In February, 1861, he was appointed a trustee of Farwell Hall, in Chicago; in April of the same year, a member of the first war finance committee of that city; in 1864, a director in the Fourth National Bank; in 1865, a director of the Provident Life Insurance and Investment Company; in 1871, a trustee of the Chicago Relief and Aid Society; in 1879, a trustee of St. Luke's Free Hospital; and in 1885, president of the Board of Trustees of the Young Men's Christian Association.

He has now withdrawn from the presidency of the Fargo & Southern Railroad, and holds no office limiting his command of his time. Aside from large interests in Chicago, he has a wheat farm of 2,400 acres, far west of the Mississippi, upon which the harvesters are now—September 9, 1887—threshing the wheat at the rate of two thousand bushels per day. He resides, in winter, in Chicago, and in summer in Detroit, Minnesota.

The following obituary notice is taken from the Worcester Palladium of April 30, 1856:

"In this paper is announced the death of an old and respectable citizen of Worcester, Capt. JOHN EARLE. He was the first person in town who manufactured machinery. It was near the commencement of the present century that he commenced the manufacture of machines for carding wool, at the village of New Worcester. From there he moved to a shop that stood upon Mill Brook, where the Court Mills now stand, and there formed a copartnership with a Mr. Williams. In 1815 their works were destroyed by fire and, as insurance was far from common at that day, Mr. Earle found himself suddenly deprived of all his property. The relation of debtor and creditor was far different then from what it now is, and Mr. Earle was unable to resume the business on his own account. But for many years he was connected with the manufacture of machinery, and aided largely in the prosecution of what has now become the leading business of the city. He was an upright man and a good citizen."

The children of John and Lydia (Harrington) Earle were:

1575–1. HENRY EARLE, b. June 8, 1801; m. Lucinda B. Pearce.

A local newspaper, in noticing his decease, says:

"He was a young man of much promise, prudence and practical knowledge of the honorable occupation he had chosen as the business of his life. Unlike too many of his age, who seem to look with contempt on the vocation of their fathers, and seek the follies, if not the vices, of city life, he loved his rural home and friends, and the world-blessing occupation in which he had been bred. He was modest, amiable, upright and unpretending in his every-day deportment, which endeared him to all his acquaintances. The death of such a young man is a great loss to the community at large, as well as to his friends."

The following extract is from an obituary of him published in a local newspaper:

"When nine years old he received injuries to his hip by falling across a log, causing a lameness that lasted him through life. He was appointed sexton in 1835, and served in that capacity over forty-three years, during which time he interred 1,124 persons and attended all funerals requiring the use of the hearse. His business was that of a stone-layer, and in his workmanship he was excelled by no person about here, and his strength of endurance at times was wonderful. At the marriage of Mr. Earle thirty persons were present and chairs being scarce rough boards were substituted. After the ceremony was performed refreshments were served and the genuine old-fashioned New England 'toddy' was made in a large white mug and passed around in a quart tumbler from which all took a generous, but temperate sip. Rev. Aaron Leland officiated at the wedding, and as a fee received two dollars, one of which he presented to the bride. The sixtieth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Earle's marriage was commemorated January 23, 1878, and in the following spring occurred the death of Mrs. Earle.

Mr. Earle was a member of the Congregational Church over fifty-seven years, joining at the same time with his wife, in 1828, and together they signed the first temperance pledge ever offered in town, which they lived up to all their lives."

He died suddenly, when in apparently good health, not having "lost a meal, or a night's sleep in over seven years."

"He developed in early years a taste for the study of medicine. Opposed by his parents and friends the desire grew stronger, and by dint of hard work, perseverance and 'pluck,' he struggled on until, in 1863, he graduated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City. Eclecticism impressed him as being the nearest right of the several schools of medicine, and he became an ardent follower in that line of practice. Beginning in his native village, he has by steady application gained a practice seldom possessed by the country doctor. Robust, active and keen, he has made his life a financial success. Aside from his profession he is the owner of a farm of 300 acres, upon which he displays his love for the soil by keeping the whole under a fine state of cultivation. At fifty years of age he is in the prime of life, and is looking forward to many years of activity."

1864– 9. DAVID L. HEWITT, b. Jan. 28, 1840; d. Dec. 3, 1860.

[862-3]. Henry[7] Earle (Guy,[6] Esek,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Guy and Cynthia (Smith) Earle, b. Dec. 16, 1820, in Edwards, N. Y.; m. July 25, 1841, Laura, dau. of Robert and Helen (Kerr) Watson, of Edwards, N. Y., where they live, and he is a farmer.

Their children were:

1880-1. BRUCE EARLE, b. March 10, 1842; m. 1st, Emma A. Perkins; 2d, Elizabeth Freeman; 3d, Sarah Courchaine.

1881–2. KATY EARLE, b. April 6, 1848; m. George Flack.
1882–3. MILTON EARLE, b. Dec. 25, 1858; m. Oct. 26, 1879, Eliza Boudrie, of Ottawa, Canada, and lives in Corning, Mo.; 1 dau., Edna Earle, b. Aug. 5, 1881. } Twins.
1883–4. MINNIE EARLE, b. Dec. 25, 1858; unm. } Twins.

[864–5]. Otis[7] Earle (Guy,[6] Esek,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Guy and Cynthia (Smith) Earle, b. Nov. 11, 1826, in Champion, N. Y.; m. Nov. 12, 1851, Sarah, dau. of Noah C. and Sally Ann (Gilmore) Williams, of Hermon, N. Y. He was a merchant in Edwards, N. Y., but removed in 1860 to Hermon, where he continued in the same business, and d. Feb. 5, 1877.

He was commemorated by the subjoined obituary, in a newspaper at Hermon:

"The death of OTIS EARLE, Esq., took place at his residence in this village at an early hour Monday morning, Feb. 5th. His disease was pneumonia, brought on, in part, it is believed, by his over-exertion at the burning of Mr. Van Atter's house, a week before his death. He passed away calmly and peacefully.

His funeral was attended on Wednesday, by Rev. Dr. J. S. Lee, of Canton, assisted by Rev. J. H. McCullough, of this village. It is estimated that nearly a thousand persons were present during the services, though many could not get into the church, which was crowded to its utmost capacity. The Freemasons, accompanied by the band, whose instruments were draped in mourning, were present from Canton, Russell, Edwards, Richville, Gouverneur and Hermon, 175 in number, and they conducted the solemn and impressive service of the Order at the grave, through their representatives, Rev. Mr. McCullough and Hon. D. S. Lynde.

Mr. Earle was a resident of this village fifteen years, having previously done business in partnership with J. B. Pickett, Esq., in Edwards, for more than ten years. Peace to his memory."

Their children were:

1884–1. FLORENCE EARLE, b. April 21, 1856; m. S. Wright Payne.
1885–2. CHARLES PLINY EARLE, b. June 24, 1858; m. Addie B. Chapin.

JOHN MILTON EARLE.

[865–6]. Ashbel[7] Earle (Guy,[6] Esek,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Guy and Cynthia (Smith) Earle, b. Feb. 14, 1830, in Edwards, N. Y.; m. Nov. 4, 1852, Sarah, dau. of George and Sarah Allen, of Edwards, and is a mason and farmer in Edwards.

Their children were:

1886–1. CYNTHIA EARLE, b. July 3, 1856; d. 1859.
1887–2. ALICE E. EARLE, b. June 12, 1860; m. June 12, 1884, Henry Lutz, and lives in Seneca Falls, N. Y.; 1 ch., Charm Lutz, b. April 30, 1885.

[867–8]. Warren[7] Earle (Guy,[6] Esek,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Guy and Cynthia (Smith) Earle, b. Sept. 8, 1835, in Edwards, N. Y.; m. March 21, 1859, Amorette L., dau. of Battese and Sally Ranger, of Russell, N. Y. They removed, in 1863, to Russell, where he is engaged in farming.

Their only child was:

1888–1. ROLLA W. EARLE, b. Oct. 24, 1861; m. March 1, 1883, Mary Daniels.

[868–1]. John[7] Milton Earle (Pliny,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Pliny and Patience (Buffum) Earle, b. April 13, 1794, in Leicester, Mass.; m. June 6, 1821, Sarah (b. Aug. 26, 1799; d. March 9, 1858), dau. of Tristram and Sarah (Folger) Hussey, of Nantucket, Mass., and d. Feb. 8, 1874.

Of his wife an obituary notice says: "Aside from her own family circle, no one has cause to mourn more deeply than the slave, for whose interests her labors were untiring."

The following sketch is mostly taken from obituary notices published soon after his decease:

JOHN MILTON EARLE was educated in a common school and at Leicester Academy. He assisted in his father's business, and at one period was clerk in the store of the Northbridge cotton mill at Whitinsville, of which Paul Whitin, Pliny Earle & Brothers and others were proprietors. In 1816 he went to Worcester, where, with his future brother-in-law, Anthony Chase, and under the firm name of Earle & Chase, he opened a store on the northern corner of Main and Thomas streets. Their place of business was afterward removed farther south on Main street, and in 1823 they purchased the Massachusetts Spy, to the columns of which John M. had previously been a contributor. For thirty-five years afterward, until 1858, he was its principal manager and editor, and during fifteen years of that time its sole proprietor. It was in the course of this period that the Daily Spy was established, the first number having been issued July 22, 1845.

His best years were given to editorial work, and in that work he doubtless had greater influence than many men whose names were more widely known. He was a careful and accurate writer, both as to style and manner, invariably courteous and candid, making no random statements and never indulging in insinuation or innuendo. He was especially self-reliant, forming opinions and reaching conclusions for himself; and when once he had taken a position it needed a vast shining of the 'inner light' to alter or change his views. But men knew where to find him, and always on the right side of every moral issue before the public. He wrote with the grace and elegance born of native ability and the constant friction of weekly and daily duty. Seldom did he indulge in humor or playfulness, though he loved and enjoyed the sharp encounter of harmless wit.

Though not a technical Garrisonian abolitionist, he was one of the earliest pioneers in the anti-slavery movement, making that sentiment always prominent in his political faith, even while an ardent whig. He was second only to the late Judge Charles Allen, at the time of the Free Soil movement in 1848, in bringing about the great political revolution which resulted in the election of George S. Boutwell as Governor of Massachusetts, and Charles Sumner and Henry Wilson as United States Senators. "This controversy was a most painful event to him, because it brought him into opposition with men whom he personally esteemed and who had been his political associates, but he did not shrink from the strife, and, of course, there could be no doubt, as he stood upon the parting of the ways, in which direction his convictions of duty would lead him." His influence through the newspaper which he conducted did much to put Massachusetts on the right side in the great struggle between slavery and freedom, which was fought out within the next fifteen years, and especially to make Worcester county the stronghold of conscientious and determined political opposition to slavery. It was called the 'banner county' of the State, in that great conflict of opinion which resulted in the war of the rebellion and the extermination of chattel bondage in the United States. "Mr. Earle had few superiors in the country in editorial ability and experience, and there are few who have devoted so many years to journalism. In this regard, as well as in some others, he much resembled his distinguished friend, William Cullen Bryant."

Among various official positions which he held, aside from his arduous duties as a journalist, he was Representative to the General Court in the years 1844, 1845, 1846, 1850, 1851 and 1852, and Senator in 1858. During his service as member of the Legislature, he was in the habit of writing the leading editorial articles for the Spy in the cars on the way to Worcester at night; frequently pencilling his criticisms of public men and measures on the blank margin of the Boston Journal.

He was likewise a member of the Convention for the revision of the Constitution of the State, which held its meetings in the State House in Boston, in 1853. In a letter written April 16 of that year, he says, "The Convention will meet in about two weeks. I shall go in favor of very radical changes in our system, taking all patronage from the Governor and other executive officers, and bringing all elections as near to the people in their primary organizations as possible. I shall therefore go for representation, in both branches, by election in single districts, the apportionment thereof based not upon population but upon voters, so that the representation shall be, what it professes to be, one of the actual sovereignty."

While political journalism was his work during so many years, conchology, botany and horticulture were his recreation and delight. As a pomologist, botanist, &c., he had few superiors in this country, being hardly second even to his friend, the Hon. Marshall P. Wilder, with whom he was always very intimate. He studied botany, both theoretically and practically, in his early years, generally carried his box for flowers with him when riding in the country in the floral months, and frequently traversed field, meadow and forest in search of specimens. Hence few were so well acquainted as he with the flora of Worcester county. He was one of the founders of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, one of its officers from the beginning, its president for several years, and one of the largest contributors to its exhibitions. He was an acknowledged authority on all matters relating to garden culture, and had no greater pleasure than in comparing notes with other enthusiasts in that line, discussing and testing the merits of new varieties of flowers or fruit, or freely imparting his stores of knowledge to interested listeners.

As he married in Nantucket, he frequently visited that island, where he became acquainted with the captains of whale-ships who brought sea-shells of both the Atlantic and the Pacific ocean. This gave him the opportunity to select the finest specimens for his own conchological cabinet. He knew not only the dealers in shells, but most of the owners of large private collections in New England and the Middle States, and thus had facilities for enlarging his collection by frequent exchanges. Several years before his decease, he gave this collection, which had become the most extensive in the county, and was scarcely equalled by any other private one in the State, to the Natural History Society in Worcester.

He was an Alderman of the city of Worcester soon after its incorporation, one of the Vice-presidents of the Worcester County Institution for Savings, and a Director of the State Mutual Life Assurance Company from its organization to the time of his death; and held offices of trust in other institutions.

On the 12th of May, 1859, he was appointed by Gov. Nathaniel P. Banks "Commissioner to examine into and report upon the condition of the Indians and descendants of the same in the Commonwealth." President Lincoln, in 1862, appointed him as Postmaster of Worcester, an office which he filled with the same conscientious fidelity which distinguished all his conduct in public and private life. At the expiration of his term he was reappointed by Andrew Johnson, the commission bearing date of July 7, 1865. Not long afterwards he received a printed circular endorsing Johnson's policy, with the request that he should sign it and return it to the Executive department at Washington. As he could not conscientiously sign it, he laid it aside and made no reply. The circular was soon followed by another, identical in its purport and request with the first. This, too, was laid aside, unsigned and unacknowledged. As might have been expected under the then existing administration, and as he did expect, his removal from office was not long delayed. And thus was sacrificed, for opinion's sake, one of the most lucrative governmental positions in Massachusetts.

THOMAS EARLE.

From that time he took no active part in public affairs, though he retained to the last his interest in them, and was always willing to give his counsel, advice, and any information in his power, to those of his friends who desired them.

"He was a faithful member of the Society of Friends, an upright, God-fearing man, beloved and respected in every private and public relation."

The children of John Milton and Sarah (Hussey) Earle were:

1889–1. ANNE H. EARLE, b. April 17, 1822; m. Edward Southwick.
1890–2. ELIZABETH EARLE, b. May 4, 1824; d. Jan. 13, 1858.
1891–3. MARY F. EARLE, b. July 25, 1826; d. Aug. 25, 1826.
1892–4. CATHERINE EARLE, b. Jan. 24, 1828; m. Moses Farnum.
1893–5. MARTHA B. EARLE, b. Dec. 28, 1829; m. Henry Earle [1900–3].
1894–6. SARAH F. EARLE, b. Dec. 8, 1831; lives, unm., in Worcester.
1895–7. PLINY EARLE, b. July 21, 1834; lives, unm., in Leicester.
1896–8. SAMUEL H. EARLE, b. May 25, 1837; d. Sept. 22, 1837.
1897–9. FRANCES C. EARLE, b. April 2, 1840; lives, unm., in Philadelphia, Pa.

[869–2]. Thomas[7] Earle (Pliny,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Pliny and Patience (Buffum) Earle, b. April 21, 1796, in Leicester, Mass.; m. July, 1820, Mary (b. May 20, 1798; d. Oct. 27, 1886), dau. of Uriah and Phebe (Folger) Hussey, of Nantucket, Mass.; resided in Philadelphia, Penn., and d. July 14, 1849.

He was educated at a common school and at Leicester Academy, assisted his father in business during the last years of his minority, was a few months in the store of Earle & Chase, in Worcester, and removed, in 1817, to Philadelphia, where he became one of the firm of Earle & Barker, Commission Merchants for the sale of domestic goods. The firm was afterward changed to Earle & Gaskell, and the two copartnerships extended over a period of about six years. But the mercantile business was less agreeable to him than literary, professional and philanthropic pursuits, and he was not successful in it. In 1824 he began the study of the Law, and in due time was admitted to the Bar in Philadelphia, where he practised his profession during the remainder of his life.

Aside from his legal avocations he was engaged, for many years, as editor or assistant editor, of several newspapers, in succession, and was interested, as publisher, in two of them. He was at one time the sole editor of The Pennsylvanian, the leading anti-slavery paper of the period in Pennsylvania. In the canvass for president, in 1825, he at first supported General Jackson, but after the publication of "the Monroe correspondence," he transferred his allegiance to John Quincy Adams. He was, however, so well satisfied with the first term of the administration of Jackson, that he advocated his re-election.

He was the first, and for nearly twenty years the persistent and laborious advocate of a reform of the Constitution of Pennsylvania. He began this work soon after his admission to the Bar, by contributions to the columns of such papers as would publish them. Subsequently, he continued it in papers the command of whose columns he possessed by right of editorship; and at length he and a Mr. Johnson were joint owners of the Mechanics' Free Press and Reform Advocate, which was specially devoted to it. The cause gradually gained adherents, slowly at first but rapidly afterwards, and the reform was at length consummated, in 1837, by a convention to which he was one of the delegates, and of which he was called the "father." When the convention assembled, his views had become so generally acceptable to the dominant party, that it was understood that any office within the gift of the people of the State was open to him. But he neither sought nor desired office. His object was, the greatest good of the people under the organic law. Hence he sacrificed all political preferment to a sense of justice and of duty, in advocating the right of colored citizens to the elective franchise. He would let the negro vote,—the majority in the convention, representing the democratic party, would not. "His," wrote John G. Whittier, "was a heroic martyrdom of the politician, the self-immolation of ambition at the call of duty. In the history of political men there are few such instances on record."

"With a great portion of the amended constitution," remarked a Philadelphia editor, in an obituary notice of him, "he was satisfied, and united with the majority in its favor. But, in relation to the extension of the right of suffrage to the colored people, the limiting of the terms of judicial officers and giving their appointment to the people, and some other things intended to take patronage from public officers and bring it as near as possible to the people in their primary organizations, which caused some of the warmest debates in the convention, he was in the minority. He was in advance of the people. He lived to see his principles more fully carried out in the revised constitution of New York; and that they will more generally prevail than they have done, there can be no doubt."

He was "born and bred" an opponent of slavery, and from a comparatively early period in the great struggle for the emancipation of the chattelized American negroes, he took an active and prominent part. Soon after he went to Philadelphia he joined, and for many years was one of its counsellors, the old anti-slavery society of which Benjamin Franklin and Dr. Benjamin Rush had long before been members. After the accomplishment of the revision of the Pennsylvania Constitution, he took no active part in the politics of the State, and devoted more of his time and energy to the promotion of the anti-slavery cause. In consequence of individual peculiarity of opinion upon "side issues," or points, principles and methods of action minor to the great object aimed at, he was not an "abolitionist," in the technical and limited sense of the word which was prevalent at that time; but, by constitution, by heritage, by education and by conviction, he was always an "abolitionist," in its true and general signification, as applied to slavery. And during the decade from 1838 to 1848, few men in the country devoted so much time and labor gratuitously, as he, to the advancement of the enterprise for the redemption of the nation from the ignominy of permitting and sustaining the holding of human beings as chattels. In the business of the anti-slavery meetings he was ever active, and to the columns of the anti-slavery periodicals—particularly The Pennsylvanian and The Pennsylvania Freeman—he was an abundant contributor.

In the canvass of 1840, for the presidency of the United States, the Liberty Party, then just organized, elected him as their candidate for vice-president, on the ticket with James G. Birney for president. The correspondence in relation to this appointment is placed in the Appendix.

As early as 1823, he published a pamphlet on "The Right of States to alter or annul Charters," a copy of which, with a letter, was sent to Thomas Jefferson and elicited from him, in reply, the following vigorously expressed comment:

"MONTICELLO, Sept. 24th, 1823.

SIR:—Your letter of August 28th, with the pamphlet accompanying it, was not received until the 18th instant.

That our Creator made the earth for the use of the living, and not of the dead; that those who exist not can have no use nor right in it, no authority or power over it; that one generation of men cannot foreclose or burthen its use to another, which comes to it in its own right, and by the same divine beneficence; that a preceding generation cannot bind a succeeding one by its laws or contracts,—these deriving their obligation from the will of the existing majority, and that majority being removed by death another comes in its place with a will equally free to make its own laws and contracts; these are axioms so self-evident that no explanation can make them plainer, for he is not to be reasoned with who says that non-existence can control existence, or that nothing can move something. They are axioms also pregnant with salutary consequences. The laws of civil society indeed, for the encouragement of industry, give the property of the parent to his family, on his death; and in most civilized countries permit him even to give it, by testament, to whom he pleases. And it is also found most convenient to suffer the laws of our predecessors to stand on our implied assent, as if positively re-enacted, until the existing majority positively repeals them: but this does not lessen the right of the majority to repeal, whenever a change of circumstances, or of will calls for it. Habit alone confounds civil practice with natural right.

With my thanks for the pamphlet, be pleased to accept the assurance of my great respect.

TH. JEFFERSON."

One of his earliest efforts, while a member of the Law Academy, was an "Essay on Penal Law," which was considered of such merit that it was published by the Academy. In 1830 he published "A Treatise on Railroads and Internal Communication." As the first book upon the subject in the country, it was "held in high esteem;" and it is still valuable as a historic illustration of the status of the railroads of that early day, and as a point from which to measure the subsequent remarkable progress of improvement in them. He wrote a spelling-book upon an original and novel plan. It was approved by teachers and school-committees, and was introduced in some of the Philadelphia schools. Had his life been prolonged it would probably have been brought into more general use. His most elaborate published work was the "Life of Benjamin Lundy," one of the pioneers in the crusade against American slavery.

He acquired a good degree of proficiency in the French, German, Italian and Spanish languages, and in his later years, in which much of his time was devoted to literary pursuits, he began "A Grammatical Dictionary of the French and the English Language," based upon a plan which he believed would greatly facilitate the acquisition of a knowledge of the French. The intensity of his labor upon this, together with his professional practice and the work in other enterprises in which he was interested—one of which was the translation into English of Sismondi's "Italian Republics"—undoubtedly contributed to the undermining of his constitution, and the hastening of the disease which terminated in death.

We have before us many appreciative obituary notices published soon after his decease. The extract given below is from one which appeared on the 26th of July, 1849, in the editorial columns of the Pioneer and Herald of Freedom, which was published in Lynn, Massachusetts:—

"We knew Thomas Earle well; and therefore we feel how difficult, how impossible it would be to tell others how well we loved, how greatly we respected, and wherefore we so well loved and so greatly respected, that remarkable man. We were honored by his acquaintance and blessed by his friendship. We were instructed by his wisdom, and encouraged by the nobleness of the life he lived. We have read, and have found a melancholy pleasure in reading, numerous obituary notices of him which have been published by our editorial contemporaries,—as well those belonging to different political and different religious parties, as those connected with no party in politics nor with any sect in religion. Those notices abound in well-deserved eulogium. They speak of the departed as 'a philanthropist,' 'a man of powerful intellect,' 'of acute discrimination; an intense thinker, a careful observer of men and things, a close and severe student, a man of enlarged views,' 'of warm and generous impulses,' 'an ardent advocate of whatever he deemed calculated to ameliorate the condition or advance the progress of his race,' 'an able public debater,' who 'carried great energy and zeal into every cause to which he was devoted,' 'a philanthropist whom oppression could not swerve; a politician whom politics could not corrupt;' and 'a Christian whom sect could not circumscribe.'

But all this, strong and eulogistic as it is, must needs, as it seems to us, fail of giving, to any one not acquainted with Thomas Earle, an adequate conception of the man. Such a conception of our friend we, of course, as we have already intimated, shall not attempt to convey. Only they who were favored with an intimate communion with him could appreciate his worth. Were we to endeavor an indication of that phasis of his character which ever most forcibly impressed us, we should say it was his intense honesty, which seemed to control and direct all the activities of his noble and energetic nature. Ever since knowing him, the old and oft-repeated line of Pope's, has had, for us, a profounder significance than we had thitherto perceived in it. We think it was his intense love of justice that made him so earnest and unintermitting a worker. Such another worker we are not sure that we ever knew. And taking the definition of worship given by Carlyle's famous monk, he was also one of the devoutest of worshippers,—'Work is worship.' * * * *

'An honest man 's the noblest work of God,'

A short time before his death Mr. Earle was asked if he had any dread of dying, and answered with a smile, 'not the least,' but expressed some regret that he could not remain to complete his various unfinished works. * * * *

'I never,' we once heard Dr. Follen say, 'witnessed a virtuous act but it increased my faith in man's immortality.' By how much more is one's faith in that doctrine increased when one looks at the life of an honest and able man! Thomas Earle yet lives and works. He lives and works in a higher sphere; and he lives and works, as he lived and worked while visibly among us, for humanity. God be thanked for the gift of such a man."

His widow—herself the possessor of an unusually brilliant intellect—thus wrote of him:

"In generous disregard of self, in the kindest forbearance for the weaknesses and errors of others, in patient investigation of all subjects, moral, intellectual and physical, and in steadfast adherence to truth and honor, I have never seen his equal;" and of his own principles, he said,—"My democracy is that which was advocated by Jefferson; my religion, that of the New Testament."

The children of Thomas and Mary (Hussey) Earle were:

1898–1. PHEBE H. EARLE, b. Aug. 9, 1821; m. Joseph Gibbons.

1899–2. GEORGE H. EARLE, b. Dec. 8, 1823; m. Ellen Frances Van Leer.

1900–3. HENRY EARLE, b. Nov. 15, 1829; m. Martha B. Earle [1893–5]; d. Oct. 9, 1874.

1901–4. CAROLINE EARLE, b. Sept. 28, 1833; m. Sept. 28, 1854, Richard P. (b. Feb. 19, 1828), son of Thomas White, of Londonderry, Ireland, and lives in Philadelphia, Pa.; 1 son, Thomas Earle White, b. Nov. 18, 1857; m. Feb. 9, 1880, Martha Stockton (d. Sept. 4, 1883).

CAROLINE EARLE WHITE has for many years been the President of the Woman's Branch of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and one of the most earnest and active members of that association. Her several annual reports, prepared by virtue of that office, manifest her sincerity of purpose. Her writings in opposition to the practice of vivisection are among the most able that have been published upon that subject.

RICHARD P. WHITE is associated with his brother-in-law, George H. Earle, in the practice of law, and is one of the most prominent and successful lawyers of the Philadelphia Bar. As a pleader he has few equals.

[870–3]. Lydia[7] Earle (Pliny,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Pliny and Patience (Buffum) Earle, b. March 24, 1798, in Leicester, Mass.; m. June 2, 1819, Anthony (b. June 16, 1791; d. Aug. 4, 1879), of Worcester, Mass., son of Israel and Matilda (Butterworth) Chase, of Leicester, Mass. They lived in Worcester, where she d. May 2, 1852. Anthony Chase m. 2d, April 19, 1854, Hannah (b. April 26, 1824), dau. of Daniel and Phebe (Greene) Greene, of East Greenwich, R. I., and had two children, Emily Greene, who m. Joseph Russel Marble, and lives in Worcester; and Frederick Anthony, d. Sept., 1862.

In allusion to LYDIA EARLE CHASE, the writer of a memoir of her son Pliny says, "She was a woman of remarkable strength of mind and independence of character." To this it may be added that, in her home life she furnished a notable demonstration of the ability to conceive, and the energy to put into practice, a prudent, wise and thrifty household economy; and that, in conscientious devotion to her duties in the relations of wife, mother and neighbor, she was an exemplar worthy of a large following.

The following sketch is abridged from Comley's History of Massachusetts:

ANTHONY CHASE was born of a family honorably distinguished in New England from the first settlement of Massachusetts. His youth was spent upon a farm, and his education was acquired at a district school and at Leicester Academy. Owing to the untimely death of his father, he lived some years in Uxbridge and Berlin, but in early manhood (July, 1816), he removed to Worcester and entered into mercantile business with his future brother-in-law, John Milton

Earle. Endowed with a mind of remarkable vigor, clearness and comprehension, from early youth his society was sought by the intelligent and cultivated, and his influence among his associates was great. Worcester has never had a more brilliant circle of young men of culture and promise than that to which young Chase was admitted; among whom he enjoyed the particular friendship of William Lincoln, the scholarly man of wit; Christopher C. Baldwin, the genial librarian of the American Antiquarian Society, and half a score of lawyers and statesmen whose names have gained a national renown. In every enterprise for the intellectual and moral improvement of the town, Mr. Chase took a prominent part. In connection with the late Hon. Alfred Dwight Foster, he invited George Combe, of Edinburgh, to deliver a course of lectures in Worcester upon education and culture, they assuming the pecuniary responsibility for its success. Entertaining at his house Mrs. Combe, the daughter of the great actress, Mrs. Siddons, she expressed her surprise that "having come forty miles into the interior of America she had not met any wild Indians!"

He was one of the proprietors of the Massachusetts Spy from 1823 to 1835. The Blackstone canal was opened in 1828, and in 1829 the Worcester and Providence Boating Company was formed, with Mr. Chase as its agent, and he was soon appointed collector of revenue for the canal corporation. In March, 1831, he was elected Treasurer of the county of Worcester, an office which he held for thirty-four years, or until January, 1865, when he was succeeded by his youngest son, who held it for eleven years longer. In 1832 he was chosen Secretary of the Worcester Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and in 1852 was made its President, an office which he held until his decease. He was one of the founders, and the first secretary of the Worcester Lyceum, in 1829; he shaped the Worcester County Mechanics Association in its infancy, drawing up its constitution and by-laws with his own hand, in 1841; he was one of the corporators of the Central Bank in 1828; was for many years Treasurer of the Worcester Agricultural Society; for a long period a director in the Citizens (now National) Bank, and a Trustee and Vice-President of the Worcester County Institution for Savings. He took great interest in the public schools, often served as a member of the school committee, and was never wanting where a call was made for intelligent and disinterested public spirit. He at one time served as alderman; but frequently declined public offices, the duties of which interfered with his regular avocation.

Mr. Chase was a member of the Society of Friends, and held the position of elder in that body. His whole life was marked by the most scrupulous integrity, and a moral sense of rare delicacy and refinement.

The children of Anthony and Lydia (Earle) Chase were:

1902–1. PLINY E. CHASE, b. Aug. 18, 1820; m. June 28, 1843, Elizabeth B. Oliver, a niece of Goold Brown, author of "The Grammar of English Grammars"; d. Dec. 17, 1886; 7 ch.

1903–2. LUCY CHASE, b. Dec. 1, 1822; living, unm., in Paris, France.

1904–3. THOMAS CHASE, b. June 16, 1827; m. Feb. 8, 1860, Alice Underhill Cromwell, of New York (d. Jan. 20, 1882); 5 ch., Caroline, b. March 31, 1861; William Cromwell, b. Sept. 27, 1862; Thomas Herbert, b. April 17, 1864; Alfred, b. June 21, 1868; Ralph Stanley, b. Jan. 20, 1879.

1905–4. ELIZA E. CHASE, b. Oct. 8, 1829; m. George H. Chase (d. Feb. 11, 1870); 1 ch., Arthur H.; m. Léonie Voillemier. She and her son are living in Paris, France.

1906–5. CHARLES A. CHASE, b. Sept. 9, 1833; m. April 29, 1863, Mary Theresa Clark, of Boston (d. Jan. 22, 1884); issue, 2 dau., Mary Alice, b. Oct. 10, 1865; Maud Eliza, b. Sept. 2, 1867.

1907–6. SARAH E. CHASE, b. May 29, 1836; living, unm., in England.

PLINY EARLE CHASE [1902–1], after studying in the public schools of Worcester and the Friends' school at Providence, R. I., entered Harvard College without a condition in 1835, graduated with high rank in 1839, and soon afterward engaged in the occupation of a teacher. He had charge of public schools in Leicester and Worcester, Mass., successively, was an assistant in the Friends' school at Providence, R. I., and subsequently taught in Philadelphia, Pa., with the exception of two years, until 1848, when he relinquished the occupation on account of severe hæmorrhages from the lungs.

He entered a partnership for carrying on the stove and foundry business in Philadelphia, Pa., and in Wilmington, Del., and remained in it many years, not retiring from it until some time after he resumed the occupation of teaching, in 1861. He succeeded Prof. Cleveland as the principal of a school for young ladies, in Clinton street. In 1870 he visited Europe, and in 1871 was appointed Professor of Natural Science in Haverford College, Pa. He also served several months as acting-professor in the University of Pennsylvania, in the place of Professor Frazer, who had died in office. In 1875, a new chair, that of Philosophy and Logic, was established in Haverford, and he was transferred to it. The subjects now coming under his charge were particularly congenial and agreeable to a man of his mental constitution. On the organization of Bryn Mawr College, Pa., he was appointed Lecturer on Psychology and Logic in that institution. In 1886 he presided at the commencement exercises of Haverford College, as Acting-President. This was essentially the closing act of the labor of his life. In the foregoing year he had a severe attack of pneumonia, from which he never fully recovered. This was followed by a complication of diseases, in which the action of the heart was seriously affected. He now failed rapidly until his decease, which took place at his residence on the College grounds.

He was the embodiment of the student and the teacher. His leisure time throughout his mercantile life was religiously devoted to the laborious investigation of subjects, both physical and mental, many of which are among the most abstract, occult and profound. The great scope and thoroughness of this research are attested by the one hundred and thirty-five papers by him which, through a series of years, were published by the American Philosophical Society, of which he was a member, for several years one of the secretaries, and latterly one of the vice-presidents. Their titles, with those of his other writings, indicate a wide range in philology, meteorology, physics and mental philosophy. For the last twenty years or more, his investigations were chiefly directed "to the confirmation of the general postulate that 'all physical phenomena are due to an Omnipresent Power, acting in ways which may be represented by harmonic or cyclical undulations in an elastic medium.'" He was a contributor to Silliman's American Journal of Arts and Sciences, the Journal of the Franklin Institute, The London, Dublin and Edinburgh Philosophical Magazine, and the Comptes Rendus, of Paris. He published, in 1844, The Elements of Arithmetic, Part First, which was followed by Part Second; in 1848, the Common School Arithmetic; in 1850, another arithmetic, prepared in conjunction with Horace Mann; and in 1884, Elements of Meteorology for Schools and Households; Parts First and Second. He also delivered many lectures and addresses and made many contributions to periodical literature.

He was a member of many scientific and literary societies in the United States and foreign countries. He took the degree of Master of Arts at Cambridge, in 1844; the Magellanic medal of the American Philosophical Society was awarded to him in 1864, for his paper on the "Numerical relations of Gravity and Magnetism"; and the degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Haverford College in 1876.

Allen C. Thomas, a fellow professor at Haverford College, writes of him as follows:

"He could speak, with comparative ease, six or seven languages, while with the aid of a dictionary he could read one hundred and twenty, including dialects. He was one of the two or three men in the country who could read Eliot's Indian Bible. * * * He belonged to that class of philosophers who are ahead of their times, men who see, though it may be imperfectly and dimly, very deeply into the relation of things, and whose speculations, like those of the Marquis of Worcester, though misunderstood and perhaps even unintelligible to contemporaries, contain truths grasped and accepted by future generations. * * * Rarely does it fall to the lot of any one to meet a purer life, a kindlier heart, a greater simplicity, a more perfect humility. Never putting himself forward, he was always ready to listen to others, and always treated them with kindness and consideration. His own extensive attainments were kept in the background, so much so, indeed, that many of his friends were not by any means aware of the extent and variety of his knowledge."

THOMAS CHASE [1904–3] pursued his preliminary studies in the public schools of Worcester, entered Harvard University in 1845, was graduated with much distinction in 1848, and received the degree of Master of Arts in 1851. Soon after he left Harvard he became connected, as sub-master, with the Cambridge High School, where he remained about two years. From 1850 to 1853 he held the position of Tutor of Latin and Acting Professor in the University from which he was graduated. He then went abroad and remained in Europe about two and a half years, until July, 1855. He visited the chief seats of ancient and modern culture; studied at the University of Berlin, and attended lectures in Paris.

In the autumn of 1855 he was appointed to, and accepted, a Professorship of Greek and Latin in Haverford College, Pennsylvania, which he subsequently exchanged for the position of Professor of Philology and Literature. In March, 1875, he was promoted to the Presidency of the College. In 1878, Harvard University conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, and in 1880, Haverford College gave him the degree of Doctor of Literature.

He spent the summer vacation of 1883 in travel, with his daughter, in Europe; and made an extensive European tour with his family, in 1886 and 1887, having resigned his collegiate office. He is now devoting himself to literary pursuits.

In consequence of his proficiency in the Greek language, he was appointed a member of the New Testament company of the American Committee for the revision of the translation of the Bible. Besides various review articles, essays, orations on Goethe and Schiller, Lincoln, and Whittier, and educational addresses, he has published an account of his travels in Greece, under the title, "Hellas, her Monuments and Scenery"; also editions of Cicero's Tusculan Disputations, Virgil, Horace, Livy and Juvenal, and a Latin Grammar, all of which are widely used as text-books.

CHARLES AUGUSTUS CHASE [1906–5], after preparation in the public schools of Worcester, entered Harvard University in 1851, was graduated in course, in 1855, and received the degree of Master of Arts in 1858.

He was a member of the editorial staff of the Boston Daily Advertiser from September, 1855, to April, 1862, when he made a tour of five months in Europe and returned to settle in Worcester. He was elected Treasurer of the County of Worcester to succeed his father, and held the office eleven years, from January, 1865, to January, 1876. He was also Register of Deeds for the same county, for the year 1876. In November, 1879, he was chosen Treasurer of the Worcester County Institution for Savings, one of the oldest institutions of the kind in the State, and now holds that office. For several years prior to this appointment he had been one of the trustees of the institution. He is a member of the Council, as well as of the Committee of Publication, of the American Antiquarian Society, and a member of the Worcester Society of Antiquity.

1840, William E. (d. Nov. 18, 1858), son of Isaac and Anna (Estes) Hacker, of Salem, Mass.; lived in Philadelphia, Pa., and d. May 23, 1846.

In 1831 she succeeded her sister Sarah [871–4] as Principal of the Mulberry Grove Boarding School, in Leicester, and conducted it successfully until 1839, when it was discontinued and she removed to Philadelphia. She had much literary taste, which was rendered more acute and discriminating by extensive reading; and held a facile pen, through which, and over the signature Ada, she contributed many articles to the publications of the day. A large proportion of these were poetical pieces written in promotion of the anti-slavery cause, in which she took a lively interest. Many of these appeared in the Massachusetts Spy and the Pennsylvania Freeman.

The children of Eliza and William E. Hacker were:

1908–1. SARAH E. HACKER, b. Feb. 23, 1842; living, unm., in Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.
1909–2. ELIZA HACKER, b. July 5, 1843; d. Jan. 14, 1844, in Leicester.
1910–3. JOHN HOWARD HACKER, b. May 7, 1846; d. May 24, 1846.

[877–1]. John[7] Potter Earle (Jonah,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Jonah and Elizabeth (Southgate) Earle, b. Nov. 11, 1795, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1st, Feb. 2, 1820, Susan (b. May 3, 1797, at Somerset, Bristol Co., Mass.; d. July 5, 1823), dau. of Hezekiah and Susannah Anthony, of Paxton, Mass.; issue, 3 ch.; 2d, April 13, 1824, Mary W. 1918-8. MARY E. EARLE, b. Dec. 24, 1839; d. Aug. 6, 1855.

[879-3]. Nathaniel[7] Potter Earle (Jonah,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Jonah and Elizabeth (Southgate) Earle, b. April 17, 1798, in Leicester, Mass.; after attaining his majority he went to Ohio, and remained about 25 years; returned and m. Aug. 30, 1848, Rachel A. Howard; d. May 17, 1853, in Leicester.

Their children were:

1919-1. OXILLA H. EARLE, b. Sept. 2, 1849.
1920-2. ALMIRA S. EARLE, b. Sept. 4, 1851; d. æt. 2 years.

[880-4]. Amos[7] S. Earle (Jonah,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Jonah and Elizabeth (Southgate) Earle, b. April 22, 1800, in Leicester, Mass.; m. April 25, 1838, Hannah Carpenter, of Uxbridge, Mass.; d. Jan. 19, 1853, in Leicester. His widow removed to "the West"; m. Elijah Wilson, and lives, in 1887, in Orion, Oakland Co., Mich.

Amos was engaged, for some years, in making hand-cards; and subsequently in the manufacture of satinets, in the building upon his father's homestead (now Mannville), which had previously been occupied by Pliny Earle & Brothers, for the building of carding machines.

The children of Amos S. and Hannah (Carpenter) Earle were:

1921-1. STEPHEN C. EARLE, b. Jan. 4, 1839; m. Mary L. Brown.
1922-2. HANNAH M. EARLE, b. Feb. 5, 1841; m. J. Nelson Voorhees.

1945–5. ELLEN M. MANN, b. Nov. 7, 1839; living, unm., in Worcester.

[917–9]. Timothy[7] Keese Earle (Henry,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Henry and Ruth (Keese) (Earle) Earle, b. Jan. 11, 1823, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1st, Sept. 12, 1849, Nancy S. (b. Sept. 26, 1829, in Salem, Mass.; d. Jan. 24, 1864), dau. of William E. and Nancy (Shove) Hacker, of Philadelphia; issue, 6 ch.; 2d, Oct. 10, 1867, Caroline C., dau. of Daniel and Caroline (Cartland) Osborne, of Dover, N. H.; issue, 3 ch. He lived in Worcester, Mass., and d. Oct. 1, 1881.

His education was obtained at a common school and the Academy in Leicester, and at the Friends' school in Providence, R. I. He lived with his parents and, when not at school, assisted upon the farm until after the decease of his uncle Silas Earle [357–3] when, as already stated in our notice of that uncle, he purchased, in company with Reuben Randall, the card-setting machines which had contributed very largely to the growth of the estate left by Silas. The several changes of ownership of Randall's interest which followed that purchase, until the final formation of the firm "T. K. Earle & Co.," with Timothy K. and his elder half-brother Edward Earle [927–3] as the sole copartners, together with the removal of the business to

Timothy R. Ewele

Worcester, have also been mentioned. When this company was formed Timothy K. was still in his minority, and neither of its members had any practical experience in the business.* But Timothy K. was endowed with a large share of that mechanical ingenuity which had previously appeared in several members of the family. He was quick of perception, apt to learn, industrious, energetic, and persevering, and not devoid, withal, of a justifiable ambition; while Edward was a careful and prudent financier, who had acquired a knowledge of mercantile principles and methods from his experience in another line of business, and who possessed a constitutional calmness and soundness of judgment, matured by years and improved by practice.

Thus equipped at the beginning, Timothy K. devoted himself to the work with a degree of assiduity and activity indicative not only of a mind which "acknowledges no criterion but success," but prophetic of the assurance of that success. It is not our intention, as not necessarily our province, to give a detailed account of the business of T. K. Earle & Co., or of the steps by which their establishment was enlarged until it became, as it still continues to be, the most extensive of its kind in the United States. Edward Earle retired from it in 1869, and his interest was purchased by his half-brother, Thomas, who died in 1871. In 1872, Edwin Brown, of Worcester, son-in-law of T. K. Earle, became a partner; and in 1880 a company, under the name "The T. K. Earle Manufacturing Company," was organized, with T. K. Earle as president and Edwin Brown as agent and treasurer. Of Timothy K. it has been justly said:

"Quick to recognize ability in others, and to appreciate what was needed in his business, he always associated with himself employés and mechanics of only the highest ability."

* In the "History of the American Card-Clothing Industry," by H. G. Kittredge and A. C. Gould, it is stated (p. 16) in regard to Timothy K. Earle, that "at sixteen years of age he commenced the business of card-making with his uncle, Silas Earle, and in a few years purchased his business." The assertion in the first clause of the quotation is wholly a mistake, of which there is abundant proof. Timothy K. was never in business with his uncle Silas, not even as an employé; nor was he ever employed, during his uncle's life, in any other card manufactory. After the death of Silas, his son Timothy, as stated on page 115, sold his father's machinery to his cousin, Timothy K. Earle, and Reuben Randall, and Randall's interest, after some transfers, went into the hands of Edward Earle.

His attention and his time were largely engrossed by his business. He was at one time a member of the school committee of Worcester, but, other than that, he neither held nor sought public office; and among the various subjects of general importance agitated by the people, there was but one in which he actively participated. In regard to the use of intoxicating drinks, he was a "temperance man" to the extreme, and a tireless advocate of the cause in his daily intercourse with men. He gave to it liberal pecuniary assistance, and in 1880 and 1881, he was the candidate of the prohibition party for the office of lieutenant-governor of the Commonwealth.

In religious relations he was a member of the Society of Friends, taking part in the business meetings of their organization, and, in the later years of his life, frequently "speaking in the ministry."

The children of Timothy K. Earle were:

1946–1. MARIANNA M. EARLE, b. Aug. 24, 1850; m. Edwin Brown.
1947–2. LLOYD M. EARLE, b. March 20, 1853; d. May 18, 1868.
1948–3. HELEN H. EARLE, b. Nov. 16, 1854; d. March 9, 1860.
1949–4. HETTIE H. EARLE, b. April 16, 1859; d. Jan. 27, 1860.
1950–5. CAROLINE H. EARLE, b. June 18, 1861; d. April 26, 1862.
1951–6. NANCY H. EARLE, b. July 22, 1863.
1952–7. DANIEL O. EARLE, b. Sept. 3, 1869.
1953–8. CAROLINE EARLE, b. March 19, 1873.
1954–9. HENRY HALLECK EARLE, b. May 31, 1874; d. Feb. 13, 1879.

[918–10]. Thomas[7] Earle (Henry,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), twin brother of Timothy K. [917–9], and son of Henry and Ruth (Keese–Earle) Earle, b. Jan. 11, 1823, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1st, June 7, 1849, Alice, dau. of Philip and Alice (Brown) Chase, of Salem, Mass.; 2d, June 16, 1869, Harriet Coleman, of Nantucket, Mass. He d. May 26, 1871.

THOMAS EARLE, like his twin brother, Timothy K., was educated at a public school, at Leicester Academy and the Friends' School in Providence, R. I. About the time that he reached his majority, he opened a retail shoe-store in Providence; and some time afterward engaged in the same business in Worcester, Mass.

In 1849, he and his brother, Oliver K. Earle, formed a copartnership under the firm name of T. & O. K. Earle, and purchased from Oliver Keese Earle.

Benjamin Buffum his lumber business, the yard and office of which were on the north side of Washington Square, nearly opposite the Union Depot. He continued in this business until 1865, and soon afterward, accompanied by his son Edward, he spent about eighteen months in Europe. After his return he purchased the interest of his hah brother, Edward, in the T. K. Earle & Co.'s card manufactory, and retained it until his decease.

In the late civil war he held the commission of Lieutenant in Capt. Pickett's Company of the 25th Regiment of Mass. Volunteers, and was at the taking of Newbern, N. C. He was a member of the School Committee of Worcester, for several years; and in 1870 a member of the House of Representatives of the State Legislature.

The children of Thomas and Alice (Chase) Earle were:

1955–1. EDWARD EARLE, b. Oct. 29, 1851; d. unm., Oct. 16, 1879, in Bradford, Pa. The Bradford Star said of him: "In morals and integrity in business his example was worthy of emulation by all his associates."

1956–2. PHILIP H. EARLE, b. April 20, 1854; d. March 14, 1872, in Worcester.

1957–3. ELLEN C. EARLE, b. Oct. 29, 1857; m. Oct. 25, 1882, Arthur A., son of Nicholas A. and Sarah I. (Stevens) Clarke, of Springfield, Mass., and lives in Salem, Mass.; 1 ch., Alice C., b. Nov. 29, 1883.

1958–4. THOMAS EARLE, b. March 13, 1859; d. unm., May 3, 1887, in Worcester.

[919–11]. Oliver[7] Keese Earle (Henry,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Henry and Ruth (Keese–Earle) Earle, b. Sept. 8, 1824, in Leicester, Mass.; m. 1st, June 1, 1853, Margaret M. (b. Aug. 18, 1829; d. April 6, 1863), dau. of Isaac and Margaret (Morris) Collins, of Philadelphia, Pa.; issue, 4 ch.; 2d, Feb. 7, 1865, Sarah, dau. of Cyrus S. and Mary (Burnham) Brown, of East Baldwin, Me.; issue, 1 ch.; lived in Worcester, Mass., and d. April 7, 1868.

OLIVER K. studied at the same institutions as his elder brothers, completing his education at the Friends' School in Providence, and, like them, lived with his parents upon the farm which his grandfather, Robert Earle, Jr. [174–8], gave to his youngest son, Timothy [362–8], and in the homestead which the latter had nearly completed at the time of his death.

After his removal to Worcester, as already related, he and his brother Thomas became associated as T. & O. K. Earle, in the lumber trade. This business connection continued several years; but, in 1857, he united with Mr. Willard Jones, under the firm name of Earle & Jones, in the establishment of an iron foundry. This proved a successful enterprise and he was engaged in it until the time of his decease.

He was for several years a member of the School Committee of Worcester, and was on the Board of Aldermen at the time of the establishment of the public water-works, by which water from the Lynde reservoir, in Leicester, was brought into the city. He was much interested in this sanitary provision, and devoted much time to its promotion and completion.

The children of Oliver K. Earle were:

1959–1. ALFRED C. EARLE, b. April 25, 1854; d. May 3, 1868.
1960–2. OLIVER K. EARLE, b. Feb. 7, 1857; m. Emma T. Laycock.
1961–3. MORRIS EARLE, b. Nov. 19, 1859.
1962–4. MARGARET C. EARLE, b. March 31, 1863.
1963–5. WALTER B. EARLE, b. Nov. 13, 1865; d. Sept. 22, 1866.

[927–3]. Edward[7] Earle (Timothy,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Timothy and Ruth (Keese) Earle, b. Feb. 10, 1811, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Oct. 1, 1835, Ann B. (b. Dec. 22, 1815), dau. of David and Susan A. (Barker) Buffum, of Middletown, R. I.; lived in Worcester, Mass., and d. May 25, 1877.

EDWARD EARLE attended a district school and the Academy in Leicester, and completed his education at the Friends' school in Providence, R. I. He subsequently taught the school of the district in which he lived. Soon after the attainment of the age of twenty-one years, he went, in 1832, to Worcester, and became engaged in mercantile business, temporarily as clerk in the flour store of his cousin, Robert Earle, and afterward in copartnership with General Nathan Heard. Before his marriage, in 1835, he had left this business and he and Joseph Pratt had become connected under the firm name of Pratt & Earle. This house was for many years more extensively engaged in the iron and steel trade than any other in Worcester County, and he remained in it long after the establishment and the secured success of his additional business mentioned below.

As related in our sketch of Timothy K. Earle, he was one of the two original partners of the firm of T. K. Earle & Company, when that house was first permanently formed. He retired from it a few years before his decease, and afterward took no active part in business, although his time was fully occupied in the management of public and private trusts.

The following account is chiefly taken from the elaborate obituaries of him which were published in the newspapers:

His public life began in 1843, as a member of the Board of Selectmen of the town of Worcester. In 1851, he was elected a representative in the State Legislature; in 1853, a member of the board of Aldermen of the city of Worcester; and in 1871, Mayor of the city of Worcester, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. James B. Blake. He "always bore the burden and honors of public office with quiet and unostentatious dignity, and labored with his full ability to faithfully discharge all public duties and trusts. At the time when the (U. S.) Government was seeking new methods of dealing with its wards on the frontier, he was selected, by the Society of Friends, as one of the Indian Commissioners, to act in connection with a commission appointed by the President. He personally visited the fields of their abode, studied their condition and needs, and pressed his opinions with the vigor of one who knew whereof he spoke."

"As a member of the State Board of Charities, and, in his later years, its chairman, he found a place where the innate tendency of his character, his earnest conviction, clear insight and philanthropic heart, made him of more value than men of shining talents and restless ambition could have been. He had no theories to defend, no cumbrous equipment of book-learning or class-prejudice in which to encase himself against the impressions of the heart—the call of duty and of reason. He gave himself wholly to the inward voice, following as that directed, no matter what might be the outward commotion. This is a high quality, sure to give dignity to the conduct and opinions of men in whom it appears; and in Edward Earle it was tainted neither by self-conceit, nor by any morose, or suspicious, or grudging sentiments. He was a plain, good man, with a serious kindliness of mien and of spirit,—one of those 'Religious men who give to God and man their dues.'

In his religious sympathies he was with the Society of Friends, of whose church he was an active and prominent member. He was a Friend indeed, worthy of the name which the followers of George Fox, with modest discrimination, have chosen for themselves.

His youth and middle life were laborious and successful. No dollar of his wealth was unjustly earned, or left harm or wrong behind in the earning. He did not crave excessive riches, but retired in due season from the accumulation of wealth to what was more consistent with his plan of life, the moderate and benevolent use of it. If, in his later years, his thoughts were again turned to the anxieties of business, it was no doubt for the sake of others and not for his own. He was a diligent steward of what was entrusted to his care, and no small part of his means, as of his time, was given to public uses or in acts of charity. The catalogue of his good deeds is too long to be written on earth, and no man took less pains to publish them. Of his public employments none were very conspicuous. Such he never sought, being more anxious to put his shoulder to the wheel than to ride in the cushioned seat. It is worth mentioning that he was one of the founders of the American Social Science Association, having signed the call for the first meeting, in 1865, and having been a constant member since, though seldom taking part in any but its business meetings. In this, as in many of his other affairs, his wife was one with himself, and they were earnest from the first that women should have a place in the government of the association, which has always been the case."

The only child of Edward and Ann (Buffum) Earle was:

1964–1. ANNE B. EARLE, b. July 28, 1838; m. James S. Rogers.

[930–6]. Mary[7] Bowron Earle (Timothy,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Timothy and Ruth (Keese) Earle, b. Feb. 5, 1819, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Sept. 30, 1840, Jonathan L. The following notice is condensed from the Fall River Daily Evening News of April 5, 1884:

BENJAMIN EARL, so long known in this community as one of its most upright and honored citizens, has passed on to the other world.

For 58 years he has been a resident of Fall River, for nearly half a century a professor of religion, and for the last 40 years a deacon in the Central Congregational Church. He has held many offices of trust and responsibility in town and city, discharging their duties with conscientious fidelity, and receiving therefor the oft-repeated approval of his fellow-citizens.

In 1826 he entered the office of the Fall River Monitor as an apprentice, was employed there nearly three years when he bought the establishment, and on the 1st of July, 1829, began the publication of that paper as proprietor. He continued its publication until March, 1838, when he sold to other parties. In 1836 he purchased a book and stationery store, and was the principal trader in that line for many years. His entire stock was destroyed in the "great fire" of 1843, and he lost the insurance upon it in consequence of the failure of the insuring company. Of late years a circulating library and other assimilating branches have been added to his business.

He held the office of Town Clerk from 1836 to 1846, a period of ten years. In the winter of 1846–47, he was a representative in the State legislature, and for the next three years a member of the Board of Selectmen and Overseers of the Poor. In 1849, under the administration of President Taylor, he was appointed Deputy Collector, Inspector, Weigher, Treasurer and Gauger of the Collecting District of Fall River, and—by courtesy of Mr. S. L. Thaxter—Collector, which position he held four years. He assisted in framing the City Charter, was President of the Common Council in 1858, an Alderman in 1859, Auditor and Collector of Taxes from 1862 to 1867, inclusive, and a member of the School Committee for the three next following years. He was on the Board of Trustees of the Fall River Savings Bank forty years, a member of its Board of Investment thirty years, and its Treasurer four years.

Simple in his habits, modest, methodical in business, upright and downright, prudent, a man of integrity and trust, he has done his work well as an excellent neighbor, a true friend, a judicious counsellor, a worthy citizen, a beloved husband, a kind father, and a consistent Christian. Gentle in manner, he had the flavor of the old Pilgrim stock, which gave him that vital strength of his undertakings, which was so eminently characteristic of the man. While his vigor remained he was as punctual as the clock. He was a useful citizen and most trustworthy. He not only believed in doing things well, but he did them to the best of his ability. The life of such a consistent Christian citizen is an honor to our community, and his memory one of its fairest jewels.

Their children were:

2205–1. NANCY MANCHESTER, b. Sept. 1, 1807; m. May 3, 1827, at Lorraine, Chester Bushnell; d. Aug. 31, 1877, at Le Sueur, Minn.

"NANCY BUSHNELL has led a pioneer life; and we venture to say that there is not a woman in America now living, who has braved more of peril and hardships than she. Since 1832, she and her husband, Bushnell, have lived in the outposts of civilization. Ohio first became their new home. But so soon as clearings were made, and roads opened up, they pushed farther west, and camped upon the banks of Rock River, in Wisconsin. From there they advanced westerly to Fountain Prairie, near Columbus, Wisconsin, where they opened up a beautiful farm. Disposing of the farm, they settled in Madison, in 1845, where they remained until 1852 or 53, when they removed to Minneapolis, then just founded, where they remained a few years, and then pushed back into the wilderness, south-west from that thriving city. Here, on the 28th of January, 1874, Mr. Bushnell died, in the 72d year of his age.

In reviewing the lives of these relatives, it is fair to assume that they have enjoyed a reasonable degree of happiness. But their lot, to our mind, has been a hard one. If a log cabin, a score of miles from any other habitation; away from schools; out of the range of ministers, doctors and lawyers; where the sound of the anvil has never been heard, and no tavern sign has ever creaked in the wind; too far inland for the old stage-coach, and where the weekly mail is carried on horse-back by a small, but courageous boy, with the other inseparable surroundings of such a place, yields the comforts of life, then, truly, it has been their own fault if they have not supped their full share of life's bounties. They reared a large family of sons and daughters during these pioneer years, and between parents and children the strongest affection has ever existed. Here, at least, has been unbroken sunshine and abiding consolation. The brave heart and the strong arm of the father, with the trusting faith and the maternal instincts of the mother, triumphed over the cold of winter, the heat of summer, the want, at times, of bread, and the danger of the tomahawk of the savage. Through all their perils, they had an abiding faith in Israel's God. If this faith was in fact a superstition, to them it was a reality, and bore them fearlessly onward. Their earthly pilgrimage is over, and together, across a lovely lake from the house in which Chester died, and beneath the shadow of a plain and unpretentious chapel, away from strife, and wrapped in the mantle of solitude, they lie buried. Their spirits have fled from their hiding place, and look out no longer upon the silent wilderness or the unvexed flow of the great lakes and rivers of the North. Following in their course, States have sprung into being from unorganized territories; great ships ride upon the troubled surface of the majestic waters of the giant Northwest; powerful cities, linked together with clasps of steel, dot the surface of a land teeming with life, and triumphant in the conquests of civilization. If their share in producing these achievements is small; if but little of the wealth of which they were the heralds fell to their lot, let their surviving relatives remember that they each died in the faith that a crown of glory was laid away for them, richer than the mines of Nevada, and imperishable as eternity itself."

2206–2. ALEXANDER WELCH, b. Aug. 24, 1815.

2207–3. JOHN D. WELCH, b. Oct. 30, 1819; m. Sept. 7, 1848, in Madison, Sarah H. (b. Aug. 19, 1824, in Delaware Co., N. Y.), dau. of Abraham Ogden; d. Aug. 28, 1870; 2 ch.

2208–4. WILLIAM WELCH, b. Nov. 12, 1821; m. Sept. 26, 1850, Jane W. [1129–6]. Nancy[7] Earl (James,[6] Caleb,[5] William,[4] John,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of James and Elizabeth (Soule) Earl, b. Dec. 31, 1794, in Westport, Mass.; removed with her father to Galway, N. Y.; m. Jan. 4, 1814, Edwin Potter (b. March 26, 1791; d. Feb. 13, 1863), the son of a revolutionary soldier. She is still living in Belleville, Jefferson Co., N. Y., is one of the few surviving widows whose husbands served in the war of 1812, and draws a pension from the government.

"The Potter family ranked among the well-to-do people of Ellisburgh. They were farmers, and were independent. In-doors, every nook and corner were kept in order. Regularity pervaded everything. In the morning at the appointed hour the hush of silence settled upon animated life. Every member of the family and the stranger within its gates were awed to stillness; then the worthy son of the brave old revolutionary sire would read a chapter from the Bible, after which all would kneel in prayer. In the evening before retiring to rest, the same observance of the divine and common law was held."

The children of Nancy and Edwin Potter were:

2229–1. ADELIA D. POTTER, b. March 12, 1815; m. 1st, May 1, 1838, Charles B. Taylor (d. May 19, 1843); 2d, Sept. 21, 1854, E. Sawyer.

2232–4. GEORGE NELSON POTTER, b. 1819; m. 1st, May 22, 1842, Mary N. Griswold (b. Jan. 2, 1823; d. June 10, 1859); 2d, Dec. 18, 1859, Nancy Brown; lived in Ellisburgh, and d. Sept. 19, 1876.

"His impulses were always in the right direction, and in his even and uneventful journey he advanced on the pathway of common life and filled the measure of a good citizen. His political ambition was gratified in being Deputy Sheriff of his county; his religious zeal in adhering to the Golden Rule; and he recognized a good Providence in all that was vouchsafed him. Upon a clear, frosty morning the crack of a minie rifle could be heard from the place of his birth to the place where he always lived and where he now lies. He never had a neighbor whom he could not look squarely in the face; and his last gaze upon the friends who surrounded his deathbed was as calm and guileless as was his first when his vision opened upon the world."

2233–5. ANDREW J. POTTER, b. Aug. 22, 1822; m. Dec. 27, 1847, Elmina Doane.

2234–6. ALMIRA A. POTTER, b. Oct. 6, 1825; m. Nov. 14, 1843, G. G. Grinnell; d. Nov. 29, 1858.

[1220-3]. Samuel[7] Earl (John,[6] Paul,[5] William,[4] John,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of John and Margaret (Petry) Earl, b. Aug. 9, 1822, in Herkimer, N. Y.; m. 1st, Sept. 5, 1848, Isabella (d. July 22, 1849), dau. of Alfred Putnam; 2d, Nov. 22, 1864, Frances A. (b. March 11, 1832), dau. of Abraham Ten Eyck Lansing.

The substance of the following sketch is taken from a published notice of the subject of it.

SAMUEL EARL is a prominent lawyer of Herkimer, and elder brother of Hon. Robert Earl, of the New York Court of Appeals. His father, who was a mechanic, settled in Herkimer about the year 1817, and died when Samuel was only seven years of age. His mother, who was the youngest daughter of Dr. William Petry, of Revolutionary memory, was thus left with three children to provide for. The sons worked on the farm until they had completed their education at the common schools and in Fairfield academy.

In June, 1842, Samuel entered the law office of Hon. Michael Hoffman, where he remained until the following winter, when he taught a select school at Salisbury Centre. In the following spring he entered the law office of the late Judge Charles Gray, of Herkimer, where he continued until the spring of 1846, with the exception of teaching school in the winter months, and served as assistant teacher in the Herkimer Academy, of which his brother Robert was Principal. He then entered the law office of Peckham and Colt, the late Rufus W. Peckham, of the Court of Appeals, being the senior partner of the firm. In January, 1847, he was admitted to practice, and immediately opened an office in Herkimer.

His brother Robert studied law in his office, was admitted to the Bar a year later, and then taken into copartnership with him under the firm name of S. & R. Earl, which was so continued until Robert was elected Judge of the Court of Appeals. For six years afterward G. W. Smith, formerly Judge of Oneida County, was associated with him, under the firm name of Earl & Smith, and he then took William C. Prescott as his junior partner, reserving to himself the general direction of the business, and this copartnership still continues.

His first wife was the youngest daughter of Alfred Putnam, for many years a prominent citizen of Herkimer. His second wife is a granddaughter of the late Judge Saunders Lansing, who was a brother of the late Chancellor Lansing, of the State of New York.

In politics Mr. Earl has always been a democrat, active and efficient in all political campaigns, and increasing his influence by forcible, pungent and able contributions to the columns of the democratic press. He has been a member of the Democratic County Committee for ten years, and has repeatedly represented the party in State conventions. He has also twice received the nomination for County Judge, but the republican majority in the county has been too large to overcome, even with his conceded ability and personal popularity.

For many years he has taken a deep interest in the local and traditional history of the Mohawk Valley, and his researches in that direction have been so thorough that perhaps no other living man is a better authority upon that subject. In 1876 he delivered the Centennial address at the celebration at Herkimer, which was extensively published and favorably received. Since that time he has delivered other historical addresses relating to the Valley of the upper Mohawk, and also to the Palatines who were the first settlers in that region. At several times he has been called upon to address the Oneida Historical Society. His most interesting contribution to the archives of that association is his address on Dr. Andrew A. Bartow, and the discovery by him in this country of the article known as water lime. Before the construction of the Erie canal water lime was not known to exist on this continent, and it was supposed that the Roman cement necessary for hydraulic masonry must consequently be imported. Just at the time when this cement was most needed in its construction the lime was discovered on the line of the canal in Onondaga County, and Mr, Earl demonstrated, by ample documentary proof, that Dr. Bartow was entitled to the credit of the very important and valuable discovery.

In all matters pertaining to the history of Herkimer County, or the families descended from the Palatine settlers of that part of the Mohawk Valley, Mr. Earl is thoroughly informed. The careful, patient study of this subject has been on his part a labor of love and the work of many years.

Mr. Earl resides in the old ancestral home occupied by his grandfather, Dr. Petry, before the Revolutionary War. He is director and legal adviser for the Herkimer Bank and the Herkimer, Newport and Poland Railroad, besides being largely interested, with his brother, Judge Earl, in the leading agricultural industry of the county. They have several large dairy farms, and to the management and improvement of them Mr. Earl devotes much of his time.

Some of his direct ancestors were Quakers, but at an early day he became interested in organizing an Episcopal Church in Herkimer, engaged in the enterprise of building a house of worship, and did much toward its erection. He has ever since been connected with the Church organization, either as Warden or Vestryman, and has always contributed liberally to its support.

He pursued the occupation of teacher during a short period in his early manhood. About the time of his marriage he went into mercantile business, opening a store for general trade in his native town. In 1860, he removed to Dover, N. H., where he kept a clothing store for some years. In 1865, he went to Vineland, N. J., and, three years afterward, to Chicago, Ill., where he was engaged in mercantile pursuits until 1871, when he returned to Massachusetts and settled in Worcester. Here he is known as a horticulturist, and, until quite recently, has been engaged in the sale of agricultural implements and seeds.

He is most widely known by the general public as a man deeply interested and active in the temperance movement. This is no new thing with him. He was the president of a temperance society at the time of his residence in Dover. He now holds a prominent position among the prohibitionists of Massachusetts, and has recently been nominated, by their political party, as candidate for the office of Governor of the Commonwealth. In 1886, he was their candidate for the place of United States Senator.

The following is an abridgment of a notice of him in the Rural New Yorker, of January 10, 1885:

His early youth was passed on one of the mountain farms of his native State, where he was trained to the ordinary methods of agriculture. Proposing to himself a classical education and a professional life, he entered the Troy Conference Academy, a noted institution of that day, at Poultney, Vermont, supporting himself, in rigid economy, by teaching during part of the year. The death of his father brought upon him new responsibilities which obliged him to relinquish his plan.

In 1851 he went westward, and after some years spent in teaching and lecturing, he married and settled on a prairie farm in Northern Illinois. Not finding grain raising very profitable, and being much interested in the cultivation of orchard fruits, he removed, in 1861, to his present home. The industry which has since made that town famous, had then made a very small beginning. With the rapid and immense development of it Mr. Earle has been intimately connected. He and his sons are now, probably, the largest pear and small-fruit growers in the West, having some two hundred and fifty acres planted to these crops.

Mr. Earle has been particularly successful as a commercial horticulturist, supplementing his efforts at fruit raising with much study of the best methods of marketing his products. His leisure has not been sufficient to enable him to write profusely upon horticulture; but at different times he has contributed somewhat regularly to the Rural New Yorker, the New York Tribune, the Country Gentleman and the Prairie Farmer.

Although his practical work has been mostly confined to the growing of fruits for market, he has always been deeply interested in all other branches of horticulture, whether ornamental or economic. It is no doubt due to a recognition of this genuine interest that he has so often been called upon to preside over the deliberations of horticultural societies. He was president, during its existence, of the Southern Illinois Fruit Growers' Association, was twice president of the State Horticultural Society, and was elected to the same office by the Mississippi Valley Society at its organization, a position which he still holds, having been annually re-elected.

The Mississippi Valley Society is now the largest horticultural society in the country, and we may say in the world, embracing, as it does, twenty-five States and Territories in its field; and it was probably on account of his prominent connection with this society, that the Board of Management of the World's Exposition at New Orleans, last Autumn, sent to him to confer concerning the organization of a horticultural department. He proposed plans for a very comprehensive exhibition, which should, as completely as possible, represent the horticultural wealth of all nations. His plans were substantially adopted, and he was requested to organize the exhibition on a liberal scale. On the behalf, and with the assistance of the Mississippi Valley Horticultural Society, he undertook the task, and having received the appointment of Chief of the Horticultural Department, he has since given unremitting attention to this work.

Earle (Calvin,[7] Thaddeus,[6] David,[5] William,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Calvin and Eunice (Whipple) Earle, b. Aug. 30, 1816, in Westford, Vt.; m. Aug. 18, 1842, Amanda M. Macomber (b. Sept. 18, 1820); d. June 15, 1874, in Lemars, Iowa.

He graduated at the University of Vermont, and soon after his marriage removed to Pike, Wyoming Co., N. Y., where he was for some time engaged in teaching. In 1844, he removed to Centreville, Allegany Co., where he taught until 1846, when he was elected Principal of the Academy at Springville, Erie Co. He remained at that institution until 1850, when he became so troubled with bronchitis that he resigned his position and removed to Pardeeville, Columbia Co., Wis., where he engaged in farming for a time. Having in the meantime studied law, he was admitted to the Bar and opened an office in Portage City, where he was cotemporary with L. S. Dixon, who afterward became Chief Justice of the State. His bronchial trouble returned and he again retired to his farm; but, during his residence there he held important local offices, and in 1858, was a member of the State Legislature. In 1862, he sold his farm and removed to Renville Co., Minn., where, in August of that year, occurred the memorable Sioux massacre.

Extract of a letter from Jonathan W. Earle.

"My son Radnor was killed within four rods of me, by the Indians in the Minnesota massacre in 1862, while he stopped behind me with his gun, to keep the Indians from killing me, as they were close upon me, and had fired more than 30 shots at me, at short ranges, from 10 rods down to three or four. My wife and both daughters were captured by the Indians, and kept in captivity six weeks, together with about 90 other white women and children. That is the occasion of my resuming teaching again, after having practised law 12 years in Wisconsin. I had just removed to Minnesota, and had been appointed District Attorney for the county, before the outbreak."

He lost all of his property in this raid of the Indians, but was enabled, by the aid of friends, to return to Wisconsin, where he taught school during the winter of 1862–63; and having received the offer of the Principalship of the Academy at Arcade, N. Y., he removed to that place in 1863. After four years of teaching in the State of New York, he went, in 1867, to Sioux City, Iowa, where he was elected Principal of the public schools, which position he resigned at the close of the year. In 1868 he was Principal of the Academy at Olean, N. Y.; but not long afterward he again went to Iowa, and resumed the practice of his profession at Lemars. Here he remained until the time of his death, which was the result of a gun-shot wound received while hunting.

In April, 1839, when still a minor, and living with his father's family in Ohio, he went, with consent of parents, to Iowa, then a Territory, and settled in Jackson County. In the autumn of 1840, a few days after his arrival at the age of twenty-one years, he was elected Superintendent of Schools for the County. In 1844, he returned to Ohio, and taught a school during the winter months. Early in the following year he married, soon returned to Iowa and settled in Dubuque County, where he was elected Superintendent of Schools, and, subsequently, Justice of the Peace. In 1850 he went by the Panama route to the gold regions of California, remained there a year, returned to Iowa, again settled in Jackson County, at Richland, and was elected Justice of the Peace and Assessor. "I never asked for an office in my life," he stated to one of his friends, "and I never was defeated when run."

In 1865, he removed to Missouri; in 1874, to Southern California; in 1878, again to Missouri; and finally, in 1882, again to California; —"this time to stay." He settled in Los Angeles County, first at

Pomona, where he bought a farm, but afterwards sold it and purchased another "in the beautiful Azusa valley, ten miles west of Pomona." "For thirty years he has followed agricultural and horticultural pursuits."

[1728-3]. Harry[8] L. Earle (Daniel,[7] Sylvanus,[6] Thomas,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Daniel and Adeline (Kellogg) Earle, b. Nov. 5, 1854, in Newton Falls, Ohio; m. March 4, 1876, Ella Z. Pratt, of Otsego, Mich.; lives in Minneapolis, Minn.

Having completed the Union School course in his native place he removed with his father's family to Plainwell, Mich., in the spring of 1870. It was his early desire to obtain a collegiate education; but, feeling that his father, while establishing himself in practice in a new place, could not afford to give him that advantage, and having some independence of spirit, he obtained the position of bookkeeper and clerk in a clothing store in Plainwell. In 1871, he learned telegraphy in the office in that town; in 1872, became telegraph operator and clerk in the office of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company at Allegan, Mich.; and in 1873 was promoted to the agency for the same road at Otsego, Mich., where he remained until the spring of 1880, when he accepted a position as press report operator for the Western Union Telegraph Company at Kalamazoo, Mich. Eighteen months afterwards he was promoted to the management of the Western Union office at East Saginaw, Mich., a place which, after holding it a year, he resigned, in consequence of impairment of health by close confinement.

Advised by medical counsel to seek a home farther west, and having, by night and morning study, acquired some proficiency in stenography, he accepted in March, 1883, a situation as bookkeeper and stenographer of the Fargo, Dakota, branch office of D. M. Osborne & Co., manufacturers of harvesting machines. In the following November he was made manager of the business and remained in charge of it until the spring of 1886, when he received and accepted the offer of the position of manager of the Minneapolis branch office of the Pitts Agricultural Works, of Buffalo, N. Y., a position he now occupies. In the prosecution of his duties in the last two positions, he has travelled extensively in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Dakota and Montana.

His success in the management of machine business, which is done entirely upon a credit basis, is largely due to the fact of his having employed most of his spare moments, since starting for himself, in reading law.

In the course of the past year, 1886-87, he has invented, and secured letters patent therefor from the United States, an automatic grain weigher and self-register, and an automatic band-cutter and self-feeder for threshing machines. These two devices make a saving of the labor of from four to six men, in operating each machine to which they are attached.

The only child of Harry L. and Ella Z. (Pratt) Earle was:

3053-1. EDNA A. EARLE, b. July 2, 1877.

Van Leer, of Downingtown, Pa., and lives in Philadelphia.

GEORGE H. EARLE.

With the exception of one year at a private institution in Massachusetts, he was educated in the schools of Philadelphia. In accordance with the desire of his father that he should learn some handicraft, he selected that of a mechanic, and, at the age of fifteen years, entered the large locomotive works of M. W. Baldwin & Co., in Philadelphia. He worked at machine making several years, and then began the study of law. Prior to entrance upon its practice, he passed a year in Europe, following the then recent example of Bayard Taylor by making the tour upon the continent mostly on foot and with knapsack and staff. This Bohemian life is full of the charm of an unchecked freedom. To him it proved to be unwontedly fraught with adventure, as his tour covered the period of the political upheavings and revolutions in the continental States, in the memorable year 1848.

At Munich he witnessed the struggles and riots which culminated in the expulsion from the Bavarian capital of the notorious Spanish adventuress, Lola Montez, whose beauty and diplomacy had captivated the King and won from him not only the title of Countess, but an estate commensurate to the support of the dignity of that title. He entered Vienna on foot, late in the afternoon of the day upon which Prince Metternich, the great diplomat and the head and front of Austrian absolutism, fled from it in a carriage. He reached Venice on the day the Austrians were driven from the city of the Lagoons, and all was still confusion and uproar. He was at Rome when Pius the Ninth attempted to flee from that city; at Naples he was a witness to the conflicts between the insurgents and the royal troops, in the unsuccessful attempt to depose the tyrannical Bourbon King; and finally, some months later, he was a spectator of the street fights and the terrible carnage in Paris, consequent upon the closing, by the National Assembly, of the National workshops which were the pet device of Louis Blanc for the relief of the laboring classes, but which were rapidly pushing France to the verge of bankruptcy. In these bloody encounters it was estimated that no less than fifteen thousand persons were killed or wounded.

In Venice, in the piazza di San Marco, and near the Ducal Palace, he asked a man unpacking muskets where they were made, and was thereupon seized and thrown into prison, with a dirty tin cup two-thirds full of water wherewith to quench his thirst, and some boards placed at an angle of about twenty-five degrees, whereupon, as he was informed, in the soft, Italian language, he might "repose." An improvised military counsel heard his case and released him before night-fall; not, however, until he had had time to recall the history of his surroundings, and to remember that he was within a stone's throw of the Palace of the Doges, the Lion's Mouth, the Bridge of Sighs, and the prison in which Silvio Pellico had wasted so many of his years. As he travelled on foot he was generally taken to be a German, a people then hated by the Italians; and hence, at Padua and several other places he was arrested on the suspicion that he was a German spy. He was, however, always speedily liberated. At Naples, in the open square near the royal palace, he was among the crowd between the opposing forces, when the battle, unexpectedly hastened, began. The non-combatants forced an entrance into the neighboring stores, where for hours the cries of the combatants, the incessant discharge of musketry and of cannon, and the groans of the wounded and dying were horribly audible. Bomba triumphed, but only to await his Nemesis in Garibaldi. But it was in Paris, during the week of terrific slaughter already mentioned, that he encountered the greatest personal dangers. A narrative of the occurrences would require more space than can here be granted; but twice in the course of that eventful week he was placed in positions where life or death appeared to depend upon the mere hazard of a die, with, if possible, the probabilities of the result against him.

Soon after his return from Europe, and about the beginning of the year 1849, he began the practice of law in Philadelphia, and has continued it to the present time, with a degree of success of which he has no reason to complain. The decease of his father, in the summer of 1849, undoubtedly hastened that success, by bringing to him patronage otherwise unobtainable; and his knowledge of the German language, acquired chiefly during his tour in Europe, soon gave him many clients from the large Germanic population of his native city. In 1862, he took into business partnership his brother-in-law, Richard P. White; and recently the number of partners has been increased by the addition of George H. Earle, Jr., and Thomas White, sons, respectively, of the original members of the firm.

From boyhood he was an abolitionist, and for ten years before his reception at the Bar he had taken an active part in the cause of anti-slavery in Philadelphia and the surrounding country. Like some others engaged in that cause, he had had his meetings broken up, and had been mobbed, and driven out of many places. When opposing the mob at the burning of Pennsylvania Hall, he was struck upon the head by one of them. After he began the practice of law he was employed as counsel in many fugitive slave cases, and always for the alleged slave. In the well-known case of Dangerfield, he was associated with Edward Hopper and William S. Pierce, as counsel for the defence. The trial lasted through the night, in a continuous session of fifteen hours, and resulted in the liberation of Dangerfield, who was then carried in triumph through the streets of the city. In 1856, Mr. Earle was a delegate to the national convention which nominated John C. Frémont for the presidency of the United States. He has supported every anti-slavery candidate for that office and he "took the stump" for Van Buren and Adams, Frémont, Abraham Lincoln and General Grant.

Among the many adverse consequences, either direct or indirect, of the late civil war, was the gradual demoralization of some of the larger municipal governments in the country, whereby taxation was fearfully increased, and indebtedness incurred to an extent which seriously threatened the bankruptcy of those municipalities. Philadelphia, as is well known, is one of the cities which suffered most severely in this respect. The maladministration of its government led to an increase of indebtedness at an annual average rate of three millions of dollars, until, at the expiration of a few years after the war, its total debt was about seventy millions. This alarming condition led to the appointment of a Reform Committee, composed, in about equal numbers, of members of the two leading political parties, and with the Hon. Henry C. Lea as its chairman, the object of which was, to secure a better government of the city, and, by this means, check expenditure and diminish the municipal debt. This committee was prompt, vigorous and effective in its action; but not long afterward, it was followed by a more powerful organization, composed wholly of republicans, and subsequently very widely known as the "Committee of One Hundred."

Mr. Earle was a member of each of these committees, and in the latter he was chairman of the Committee on Public Meetings. His duties in that position were constant and arduous. The Reform Committee had organized, as far as it could, a reform association in each of the numerous wards of the city, and a series of public meetings were held by each of those associations. Sometimes as many as six or seven took place on a single evening; and frequently from twenty to thirty per week were held for several successive weeks. It was incumbent upon Mr. Earle to see that proper places for these meetings were secured; that, by advertisements, hand-bills and posters, due notice of them was given; and that a sufficient number of speakers were always engaged. So far as known, there was no failure, in these respects, of any meeting called by the Committee of One Hundred. The activity, the labor, and the extent of operations of that committee may be inferred from the fact that its disbursements amounted to about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

The results of the action of the two committees—and each of them contributed largely toward the attainment of those results—were, that not only the growth of the debt of Philadelphia was stopped, but effective measures were taken for its gradual diminution, and the government of the city, in all it branches, was greatly improved.

The children of George H. and Ellen Frances (Van Leer) Earle were:

3176–1. FLORENCE V. EARLE, b. July 1, 1850; m. 1st, Sept. 28, 1872, William (d. Sept. 9, 1877), son of William and Susan G. (Miller) Nicholson, and had 1 dau., Alice E. Nicholson, b. Oct. 1, 1873; 2d, Jan. 7, 1879, Edward H., son of Joseph P. H. and Eliza H. (Troth) Coates, and lives in Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.

[1921-1]. Stephen[8] Carpenter Earle (Amos[7] S., Jonah,[6] Robert,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Amos S. and Hannah (Carpenter) Earle, b. Jan. 4, 1839, in Leicester, Mass.; m. Oct. 19, 1869, Mary L. (b. June 1, 1849), dau. of Albert and Mary (Eaton) Brown, of Worcester, Mass., where they live.

In 1853, at the age of fourteen years, he went to Worcester to live in the family of Edward Earle [927-3], his father's cousin, which he made his home until several years after he reached his majority. He was educated in the public schools of Leicester and Worcester, and at the Friends' School in Providence, R. I. He also attended some lectures at the Institute of Technology, in Boston.

He studied architecture under Calvert Vaux, the well-known architect of New York City, and, in 1865, supplemented that special education by a seven months' tour of observation of the finest specimens of the several orders of architecture in Europe. After his return he became associated in business with James E. Fuller, under the firm name of Earle & Fuller, and they opened offices in both Boston and Worcester. This partnership was dissolved in 1874, and since that time he has pursued the business alone,—his only office for the last few years being in Worcester. Aside from the many private dwellings designed by him, he has apparently had his share, as architect, of the edifices for public purposes which have been erected in Massachusetts and its vicinity. Among these are the Technical School and no less than ten churches,—including the Central Church and All Saints Church—in Worcester; the Park Church and the Slater Memorial, in Norwich, Conn.; the Slater Library, at Jewett City, Conn.; the Rogers Library, at Bristol, R. I.; the Iowa College Library, at Grinnell; the library and the chapel of the Agricultural College at Amherst, Mass.; the Goodnow Memorial Library, at Princeton, Mass.; the Lyon Memorial Library, at Monson, Mass.; the Damon Memorial Library, at Holden, Mass.; and the Town Library, at Norton, Mass. He also furnished the designs for Goodnow Hall, at Wellington, Cape Colony, South Africa.

He has recently been appointed architect of the Clark University, at Worcester, Mass., the institution founded and munificently endowed by Mr. Jonas G. Clark.

In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company C, of the 51st Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, and served eleven months under General Foster, in North Carolina. He was Surgeon's Clerk and Ward Master most of the time. He was in the Goldsboro expedition and the battle of Whitehall.

The children of Stephen C. and Mary L. (Brown) Earle were:

3189–1. CHARLES B. EARLE, b. July 18, 1871.
3190–2. RALPH EARLE, b. May 3, 1874.

His father, GEORGE B. EARLE, was an expressman, and for years managed the business known as Earle's Express. John D. was with his father as messenger for a short time, when the latter sold his business to the Adams Express Company, and the young man went into the office of that company. The firm of Earle & Prew was formed in 1867; and in the year 1870–71, John D. Earle was admitted to partnership, and shortly afterward assumed the duties of treasurer, besides acting as agent at Pawtucket, which positions he held uninterruptedly until his death. Prior to his membership in the firm, and before the establishment of the national banking system, he acted as bank messenger between Providence and Boston for ten or twelve years.

He received a commission from Governor Sprague, in 1863, as Colonel of the National Cadets of Providence. He was one of the members of the famous "Water Witch Sixes" of Providence, in the volunteer fire department. He was President of the Heaton Button Fastener and the Standard Button Companies, and for years was a trustee of the Pawtucket Institution for Savings.

Mr. Earle had resided in Pawtucket a score of years, and was always very much interested in town affairs, taking a prominent part in all the important matters that arose, and serving the town as Senator in the General Assembly. He was equable in temperament and genial in manner, and though he held a high position socially, his chief pleasure was the enjoyment of his home and family.

The children of John D. and Emily C. (Wilbour) Earle were:

3528–1. EMILY W. EARLE, b. Jan. 29, 1866.

*Mr. Earll, under date of Oct. 11, 1887, writes as follows: "Referring to the family spelling of the name, I would say that the original spelling in my grandfather's family was Earle (or possibly Earl), but that one of the oldest son of Robert C. and Sarah (Montgomery) Earll, b. Aug. 24, 1853, in Waukegan, Lake Co., Ill.; m. Feb. 27, 1883, Louisa A. (b. Sept. 24, 1856), dau. of Henry H. and Sarah (Buckmaster) Harding, of Clinton, Iowa.

He attended the public schools at Waukegan, and spent a year at the University of Chicago, leaving on account of illness; but afterward graduated in the scientific course at the Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., in 1877, and was appointed assistant to Spencer F. Baird, U. S. Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries, in 1878. He was in charge of the Sea Fisheries Investigation of the Atlantic coast for the tenth census (1880), under the direction of the Commisssioner of Fisheries; was Deputy Commissioner for the United States to the International Fisheries Exhibition at London, in 1883, and Deputy Representative for the Smithsonian Institution, the U. S. National Museum and the U. S. Fish Commission to the New Orleans Exposition in 1885. He was in charge of the Great Lakes' Fisheries Investigation in 1885, and has been in charge of the division of fisheries in the U. S. Commission of Fish and Fisheries, from 1886 to the present time.

He is the author of numerous articles on fish culture and the fisheries in the U. S. Government Reports, and in various scientific periodicals. He is an active member of the Biological Society of Washington, the Philosophical Society of Washington, and the American Fisheries Society of the United States, as well as corresponding member of the National Fisheries Society of England. Sept. 17, 1883, in Boston, Mass.

He was reared on the home farm and trained to toil, but attended the district school in winter. Ambitious and aspiring, he added much to this rudimentary education by careful study and reading at home, without a tutor. If this had its disadvantages it was not without corresponding benefits, for it taught him self-reliance and that confidence in himself which served him so well in after years. This trait of his character was always noticeable; yet, if he was confident of his own abilities in every field which he entered, it was equally true that he entered no field which his abilities did not peculiarly qualify him to fill. Physically he was very strong and had great endurance; and this, added to a rare ability to apply his efforts to the best advantage, made his achievements on the farm something quite beyond the ordinary. In the school-room, as a pupil, he won a leading place; and later, as a teacher, he made a high reputation. The bright and quick-witted pupils felt that their teacher shared with them the honors of success, and the dull and plodding learned from him methods of study and application which helped them to help themselves. In church and Sunday-school work he never tired, but labored with unswerving fidelity, not alone while at home, but during the years of his school and business life. In business, too, he was diligent and vigorous; and he carried the same force and energy into the recreations of life, entering the field of sports with all the zest of youth, even in mature manhood. He approached men with confidence and readily won their confidence. Not trained in the commercial world, he seemed intuitively to know the necessity of promptness and system in all his affairs; and these cardinal principles, together with strict integrity and persevering industry, were the four pillars upon which he reared a successful career.

He attended the academic department of Beloit College during a part of 1865 and 1866, and in 1869 was for a short time in the sophomore class of Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wisconsin. He began to teach in 1866, at Union Grove, Wisconsin. He remained there during three school years, in the course of which he was chosen President of the Racine County Teachers' Association, a position which he held until he left the county; and, in the latter part of 1869, was elected Superintendent of Schools for the same county. He was engaged in educational work, as superintendent or teacher, until the spring of 1874, when he became interested in the publication of local illustrated works. One with whom he was engaged in business writes of him: "Genealogy had a fascination for him that caused him to work with an enthusiasm which enabled him to achieve success where others had failed or would fail. His labors in this department of literature extended over a large section of country, embracing portions of Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, New York, Tennessee, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Massachusetts. He took a deep interest in the early history of localities; and wherever he went in his researches, he made himself familiar with the character and circumstances of the earliest settlers. He rescued from oblivion the history of hundreds of families; and caused to spring up, in the hearts of their descendants, a reverence for the hardy pioneers that might otherwise have lain dormant forever. He always had a helping hand and an encouraging word for his less fortunate associates in business, and was one of those who do not think it necessary to pull others down that they may rise."

After his marriage Mrs. Earle immediately became his almost constant companion, travelling with him and personally assisting in his literary and business labors. The death of their only child was deeply felt by the parents; but they went again to their work, and continued together in the field until the last illness of Mr. Earle. He had seemed the very embodiment of health, and had always looked forward to a long life almost as an assured gift. But it was not so to be. While engaged in historical work in Boston, Massachusetts, he was taken ill with a fever which terminated fatally at the end of but a single week. His remains were interred in the cemetery at Honey Creek, Wisconsin.

His life was one of usefulness and benevolence. It is a pleasant memory that comes with the mention of his name,—pleasant because it brings before us not alone a man of wisdom and thoughtfulness, but because he had added to those traits the rarer one of sterling goodness. The tribute has often been paid to him—"He was one of the best men I ever knew"; and the scarcely less complimentary opinion that "he was constantly developing and growing in ability as well as character," has frequently been expressed.

The only child of Lyman and Emogene (Partridge) Earle was:

[2862-1]. Charles[9] Warrington Earle (Moses[8] L., Calvin,[7] Thaddeus,[6] David,[5] William,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), son of Moses L. and Nancy (Hull) Earle, b. April 2, 1845, in Westport, Vt.; m. Sept. 27, 1871, Fanny L. Bundy (b. May 24, 1847), and lives in Chicago.

His father went from Vermont in 1854 and settled in Lake County, Ill., where he engaged in farming,—the subject of this sketch assisting him during the summer months, and attending school in winter. In 1861 he enlisted in the 15th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served under General Frémont, in the Missouri campaign, until the fall of that year, when he was discharged from the service, on account of disabilities incurred while unloading a transport on the Missouri river. In the fall of 1862 he enlisted in the 96th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and his military record is given as follows in the history of that regiment, published in 1886: "He was appointed first sergeant upon the organization of the company; promoted second lieutenant February 16, 1863, before he was eighteen; and first lieutenant August 12, 1864. Was a prisoner of war from September 22, 1863, to February 9, 1864, and escaped from Libby Prison, Richmond, Va., by tunneling. Was twice slightly wounded at Chickamauga, while in command of his company, and was especially commended for bravery in the report of that battle. Commanded Company D for two months in the advance on Atlanta, and at the close of the campaign was given special mention for personal bravery by the commander of the regiment, and chosen as aide and inspector on the staff of the brigade commander, which position he held until the close of the war. Was brevetted captain of the United States Volunteers for gallantry and meritorious services in the battles of Chickamauga, Resaca, and Atlanta, Ga., Nashville and Franklin, Tenn., and mustered out with his regiment in 1865."

After the war he attended Beloit College three years, entered the Chicago Medical College in 1868, and took his degree of M.D. in 1870. He is a member of the local, State and national medical societies. In 1886 he was a delegate to the British Medical Association, and at that time became a member of it. He is now President of the Chicago Gynecological Society, and Vice-President of the Illinois State Medical Society. He became a member of the faculty of the Woman's Medical College, Chicago, at its organization in 1870, and now holds the position of professor of diseases of children and clinical medicine in that institution. He was one of the founders of the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Chicago, and occupies the chair of Obstetrics in it. Since 1871 he has been Physician to the Washingtonian Home of Chicago. Among his contributions to medical literature are "Electricity in Post-partum Hemorrhage"; "Scarlatina in Chicago"; "Inebriety as a Vice"; various papers on alcoholism and the opium habit; "Cephalaematoma of the Newborn"; "Roëchlu (or German measles) in Chicago"; "Summer diseases of children"; "Cirrhosis of the Pancreas"; and others of minor importance. At this time (1887) he is engaged in a series of articles, the results of his observation in foreign hospitals, and is particularly interested in promulgating the present theories on antiseptic obstetrics.

The following obituary notice of her appeared in the New York Evening Post of March 30th, 1885:

"MRS. GROSE, who died suddenly on Saturday last after a very brief illness, was the daughter of John Earle, a well-known, now retired, merchant of Boston, and wife of Joseph Grose, of the firm of Megroz, Portier, Grose & Co., of this city. She was a woman of rare accomplishments and of unusual and marked character. She completed her school education at Mme. Mears's in Madison Avenue, and afterward took the Harvard course for women, being among the very first to take advantage of the privilege thus extended to her sex. She was a finished musician and linguist, being thoroughly trained in German, French, Spanish, and Italian, and possessing a wide knowledge of Greek and Latin classic literature. Her scholarship was not, however, of that kind which distracted her attention from the great problems of modern life, and she was active in many movements for the amelioration of the condition of those about her. Every great social question made demands on her attention which were invariably followed up by some practical suggestion or act.

She was during the latter years of her life a devoted Swedenborgian and the most prominent figure of the Swedenborgian community in this city. Her knowledge of the literature and theory of her church was exhaustive, and she was justly regarded as an authority in all matters relating to them, her strongly speculative mind having found an answer for its most imperious questions in the writings of Swedenborg, and she devoted herself to the dissemination of his teachings. She was a woman of rare sweetness as well as unusual strength and breadth of character."

ADDITIONS.

The following selections, mostly from information received too late for insertion in its proper place, will contribute to the completeness of the history of several families.

Upon the farm owned, in 1882, by Captain B. F. Wing, near the head of the Apponaganset River, in Dartmouth, Mass., there is a small cemetery containing from twelve to fifteen graves, two of which, as appears from the inscriptions on the head-stones, are those of Ralph Earle, Jr. [8–2], and Joseph Earle, Jr. [66–3]. There are no inscriptions at any of the other graves. It is probable that this was the private burial place of the Earles in that vicinity. All the public burying-grounds in Dartmouth, at that time, are recorded in the Town records.

[145–3]. MARY EARLE. James Lawton, Jr., her husband, was a saddler in Leicester, Mass. In 1739 he bought of Rev. David Parsons, of that town, a grist-mill and forty acres of land at the outlet of the Town meadow, one-half mile west of the Academy, and near the eastern foot of Mt. Pleasant, where the brick card-factory belonging to Sargent Brothers now stands.

[383–8]. Rebecca[6] Earle (Marmaduke,[5] Robert,[4] Ralph,[3] William,[2] Ralph[1]), dau. of Marmaduke and Elizabeth (Newton) Earle, b. Nov. 21, 1788, in Paxton, Mass.; m. Sept. 1, 1805, James Thompson, 2d (b. Sept. 28, 1783; d. Sept., 1846); d. July 19, 1874.

Their children were:

959–1. HARVEY M. THOMPSON, b. June 16, 1809; m. July 7, 1850, Ellen Ross.
960–2. ELBRIDGE G. THOMPSON, b. Feb. 25, 1811.
961–3. CHRISTOPHER G. THOMPSON, b. Dec. 9, 1812; d. Aug. 12, 1876.
962–4. RUSSELL B. THOMPSON, b. Dec. 29, 1814; m.

963–5. JOEL THOMPSON.
964–6. STILLMAN S. THOMPSON, b. Oct. 24, 1818.

[3528–1]. EMILY W. EARLE; m. Oct. 25, 1887, Charles H. Porter, of Rockford, Ill.

The following account of JOSEPH EARL, of Nantucket, and his descendants, is inserted here because, although his descent from Ralph and Joan has not been absolutely proved, yet the amount of circumstantial evidence that such was his lineage, is so great as to render it very nearly a certainty. Mrs. Mary Ann (Earl) Snow, his granddaughter, now 79 years of age, stated, in February, 1887, that she was "sure" that the name of her great-grandfather, this Joseph's father, was Joseph; and the date of marriage of Joseph Earl [153–4] and Eunice Hathaway is such as to render it extremely probable that they were the parents of Joseph who removed to Nantucket. If they were, this Joseph belongs to the sixth generation of the descendants of Ralph and Joan.

Joseph Earl, b. May 19, 1753; removed, in early life, from Newport, R. I., or its vicinity, to Nantucket, Mass.; m. 1st, Aug. 4, 1774, Hannah, dau. of Jacob Morris; 2d, Oct. 17, 1790, Parnel, dau. of Joseph Paddack; 3d, July 18, 1808, Susanna (b. Aug. 16, 1764), dau. of Peter and Judith Coffin; d. July 5, 1829.

The children of Joseph Earl were:

1. NATHANIEL EARL, b. Feb. 16, 1776; m. Phebe Norton.
2. JOSEPH EARL, b. Aug. 17, 1780; m. Betsey Coleman.
3. HANNAH EARL, b. May 17, 1782; m. John B., son of John and Ruth Beard; d. Oct. 13, 1856.
4. MARY EARL, b. Aug. 20, 1792; m. Moses, son of Robert Carr (2d wife).
5. SALLY EARL, b. Sept. 21, 1794; m. Thomas Brock.
6. LYDIA EARL; m. Joseph, son of Matthew Pease.
7. PARNEL EARL.

SECOND GENERATION.

[1]. Nathaniel Earl, son of Joseph and Hannah (Morris) Earl, b. Feb. 16, 1776, in Nantucket, Mass.; m. Phebe Norton (b. July 15, 1777), of Edgartown, Dukes Co., Mass.; lived in Nantucket, and d.

3. Reuben Brock, b. Feb. 15, 1820; d. Sept. 12, 1821.
4. George Washington Brock, b. Feb. 22, 1824; d. May 12, 1825.
5. Thomas A. Brock, b. Oct. 18, 1829; m. Jane Mace; d. 1886.
6. Ann W. Brock, b. July 21, 1832; m. Oct. 20, 1853, James F. Chase. They live in Nantucket.

THIRD GENERATION.

[2]. Charles W. Earl, son of Nathaniel and Phebe (Norton) Earl, b. in Nantucket, Mass.; m. Love B. Eldridge (b. Oct. 29, 1812), and Chloe Dexter, but which was the mother of his children we do not know.

The children of Charles W. Earl were:

1. Sophronia W. Earl.
2. James W. Earl.

Correspondence showing that Pliny Earle [355-1] had manufactured Machine Cards before he made those for Samuel Slater. See page 106.

Providence 11th Mo 4th 1789

Respected Friend

Pliny Earl We having pretty much concluded to alter and to cover our Carding Machine, and Joseph Congdon informing us that he expected to go to Leicester soon, we thought we would inclose & send thee the Number & diameters of our Cylinders and propose thy covering them with Cards. We have confered with our Card makers in Town about doing the jobb who appear desirous to do it, and are willing to take their pay all excepting the cost of the wire in our way, but it being our object to have it well done and thinking we could rely upon thy performance have prefer'd thy doing it. We have also had it in contemplation to write to Boston but being desirous of having it done soon, and that being likely to protract the time of having it done, have waved that also.

We are not desirous of beating thee down in thy price, or that thou should do it below what thou could reasonably afford, but we have thought considering thou has thy machinery now prepared which was not when thou did that for the Company at Worcester, that if we gave thee the same for covering ours as thou had for theirs, tho a little larger, it would be equivalent to what thou charged them considering the preparations aforesaid, which the first employers or rather those on whose account it is especially made in all such cases must expect to pay, as we have had abundant experience. If that price will answer we should be glad thou would take the pains to go & view the machine at Worcester and if their can be any improvement made upon the manner of covering that, should like thou would make it either in the Length of the Teeth, or in any other particular.

Stowel who superintends the business there, will chearfully give thee any information respecting the working of theirs, no doubt upon thy own account, and upon ours also, as we are upon friendly terms with him, having divers times been mutually helpful to each other.

We are in much want of ours being done, and should be glad to have it soon, propose therefore if thou undertakes the business that thou would set a time when thou thinks thou could bring the Cards down to put on, and we will endeavour to have the machine in readiness to receive them. Inclos'd is the dimensions of the Cyllenders that is their diameters, the second Cyllender in circumferrence thou knows has the Cards placed at some distance from each other in order that the rake may take the rolls of distinctly, ours are about 2½ Inches apart. We are of the opinion that the bend of the teeth ought to be in proportion to the circumferrence of the Cyllender on which they are placed. We propose having the Cards the same size as those on the Worcester machine, viz 16 Inches, and all Cotton Cards of equal quality excepting the feeder, and the Cyllender that takes it off of it, and we need not add of the best quality, of the number suitable for the machine, of which we suppose the machine at Worcester must be considered as a sample.

We should be glad to supply thee with any kind of live Stock, if thou should want, at Cash price or any kind of produce, cloths included, for the whole or part, of the amount, if not we will pay the cash. We think that in four weeks from this time we shall be glad of the Cards. A Line from thee by Jos^h^ respecting what we may depend on will be agreeable as we mean to prosecute the accomplishment of the business as fast as may be.

Under date of Dec. 14, 1789, Pliny Earle's brother Silas wrote to his brother Jonah, who was then in New York city, as follows:

"Pliny is going to set off for Providence, day after to-morrow morning, to put on long cards on to Almy & Brown's machine."

From a memoir of Moses Brown in The New England Magazine for July, 1887, p. 39:

"Slater arrived in New York, November 11, 1789; entered the employment of a New York company, and in two weeks was dissatisfied. He had thought of going to Philadelphia. A captain of a Providence packet informed him of Moses Brown, and advised him to write to him, which he did, as follows:—

"NEW YORK, December 2, 1789.

SIR:—A few days ago I was informed that you wanted a manager of cotton spinning, etc., etc. I have had opportunity, and an oversight, of Sir Richard Arkwright's works, and in Mr. Strutt's mill upwards of eight years. * * * If you please to drop a line respecting the amount of encouragement you wish to give, by favor of Captain Brown, you will much oblige Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

SAMUEL SLATER.

N. B. Please to direct me at No. 37 Golden Hill, New York.

Mr. Brown, Providence."

The answer is as follows:—

"PROVIDENCE, 10th, 12th month, 1789.

FRIEND,—I received thine of 2d inst., and observe its contents. I or rather Almy & Brown, who has the business in the cotton line which I begun, one being my son-in-law, and the other a Kinsman, want the assistance of a person skilled in the frame or water spinning. An experiment has been made which failed. * * *

If thy present situation does not come up to what thou wishest, and from thy knowledge of the business, can be ascertained of the advantages of the mills so as to induce thee to come and work ours and have the credit as well as advantage of perfecting the first water-mill in America, we should be glad to engage thy care so long as they can be made profitable to both, and we can agree.

I am for myself and Almy and Brown

MOSES BROWN."

The letter of Almy & Brown to Pliny Earle is deposited in the library of the Worcester Society of Antiquity, at Worcester, Mass.; and that of Silas Earle to his brother Jonah is in the possession of Stephen C. Earle, Architect, of the same city.

CORRESPONDENCE IN RELATION TO THE CANDIDACY OF THOMAS EARLE [869-2] FOR THE VICE-PRESIDENCY OF THE UNITED STATES.

"ALBANY, April 2d, 1840.

THOMAS EARLE, Esq.

SIR: The National Convention of friends of Immediate Emancipation, now in session at the City Hall, in this city, having resolved that it is their duty to concentrate their votes at the coming presidential election, have, with cordial unanimity, selected you as their candidate for the office of Vice-President of the United States, and James G. Birney, Esq., of New York, as their candidate for the office of President of the same. And they have earnestly recommended these candidates to the support and the suffrages of the friends of human rights, as men abundantly qualified and worthy to fill the high offices to which they would elect them.

With sentiments of the highest esteem, we are your friends and fellow-citizens.

MYRON HOLLEY,
JOSHUA LEAVITT,
E. WRIGHT, Jr.
Committee."

NEW YORK, April 4th, 1840.

THOMAS EARLE, Esq., Philadelphia.

MY DEAR SIR: Mr. Leavitt returned last evening from attendance on the Convention at Albany. From his account it was a dignified, judicious assembly, of from one hundred to one hundred and twenty.

A nomination was made. My name is to be held up for the Presidency; yours for the Vice-Presidency.

The Convention was not informed whether you would accept the nomination or not. The expectation is that you will. I entreat, my dear sir, if you have doubts about accepting, that you will dismiss them. This is surely not the time for men, selected by a wise and discreet Convention of their fellow-citizens to stand forth as the representatives of their principles, to draw back. You and I both have borne and suffered enough, in the struggle that our friends are making for the establishment of equal liberty, not to be afraid of assuming the new position to which they invite us.

If the independent movement is to be wholly unsuccessful, the anti-slavery enterprise is in my opinion at an end. The Whig Abolitionists who constitute, perhaps, five-sixths of the whole number, will become merged in their party. The Van Buren Abolitionists will follow their example. Abolitionism will be acknowledged to be but secondary to any and everything that the parties may think essential or convenient for them. Its distinctive character will be forgotten, and the whole movement will sink into contempt. There will then be no ground of hope left for the slave, or indeed, as I view it, for the country, except in the exterior influence of other nations on us. It may be, that when France and Spain shall emancipate in their colonies, the collisions to which their condition will then give rise may, sometime or other, make it necessary for us to emancipate. It is possible.

I have decided on going to London. Sail about May 1st. Were it not that I am more than usually engaged in making preparations for so long an absence from my children and affairs, I would go at once to see you, but this forbids.

I cannot close this letter without renewing my entreaty, that you will accept the nomination. I pray you, though I suppose that is unnecessary. * * * Should you not accept, I fear it will throw the whole movement out of joint. Much as I dislike the attitude in which accepting the nomination will place me, I shall for the noble cause sake, stand by our friends, who have ventured on so bold a step. The Convention, as I understand, have no reference whatever that the nominees have been put up for any other purpose than that of being elected. It strikes me that our answers ought to be consistent with that dignified position. I should be pleased to hear from you, at once.

Very truly yours,

JAMES G. BIRNEY.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30th, 1840.

GENTLEMEN: I duly received your letter of April 2d, communicating the unexpected information of my nomination by a convention of citizens of the United States, assembled at Albany, as a candidate for the office of Vice-President, in connection with the name of my esteemed friend, James G. Birney, as a candidate for the Presidency.

Before receiving your letter, I had deliberately weighed the question of slavery in this country as connected with political action. It appeared to me that a very large majority of the people of the United States had, for more than fifty years past, been opposed to slavery in sentiment, and favorable to its extinction by one mode or other; yet, while such was the sentiment of the people, and while, probably, not one citizen in twenty was directly interested as a slave-owner, we still saw the community of the whole Union, and of each particular State, go on, year after year, passing new laws, or continuing in force those already existing, by which the public arm was lent to the infliction, upon millions of innocent persons, of one of the greatest and most demoralizing wrongs ever sanctioned by law in any region of the globe.

It appeared to me that a change of the laws, whether found in the Constitution or in acts of legislation by which this wrong was committed, was the great final end of anti-slavery efforts; for individual outrage, of the kind in question, could not long exist unaided by the laws; and even admitting the possibility of converting all men to a voluntary performance of their duty, it was not to be supposed that the laws by which the public assisted in making slaves of human beings would be continued in force until every individual in the country should have voluntarily abandoned his share of the wrong. Hence, I believed that the conversion required of the people of this country, in relation to this matter, was not so much a conversion to a correct opinion concerning the wrongfulness of slavery, as to a practice conformable to the opinion which they already entertained; and that this conversion was as much needed at the North as at the South, for the representatives of both sections were found alike upholding the legalized injustice, and the citizens of both sections were found alike continuing to sustain such representatives.

A connected political action being, therefore, the chief end of our exhortations to the people at large, it appeared essential that we should ourselves practice that which we urged upon others; and that so long as abolitionists in general voted for slavery by voting for those who would officially sustain it, so long there was little prospect of the repeal of those unjust and cruel laws.

Hence, though I entertain a high respect for the general character of President Van Buren, and a strong attachment to the primary political principles avowed by the mass of his supporters, yet I came to the resolution to support no candidate who should not be friendly to the abrogation, in a just manner, of the constitutional and legal aid given by the Union at large to the continuance of slavery; and I determined to unite with others, whether few or many, in acting as we advised the whole people to act.

Yet I was not favorable to the organization of an independent political party, embracing but the single avowed object of the repeal of slave-making laws. I believed it to be impracticable to prevent a party so organized from soon taking the complexion of one or the other of two great political parties, which, perhaps, always exist, and which seem to rise spontaneously from the infirmities of human nature; and I thought that the probable result would be an incorporation of the new party with the weaker of the pre-existing ones, and a consequent injury to our cause from its association in the minds of the majority of the people with principles to which they were adverse.

And though the Albany Convention did not declare a design to extend a separate organization beyond the period of the pending presidential election, yet I thought such an extension might be the consequence of its action. And though its members avowed that they did not intend to confine their efforts to a single question of public policy, but they would favor the enjoyment by all of the greatest degree of liberty which could exist in connection with just laws; yet I thought this declaration not sufficiently definite to avert the apprehended danger. I therefore delayed replying to your communication, in order first to ascertain the course which should be taken by the political Convention of friends of the Albany nominations which was to be held in New York on the 11th inst.

The proceedings of that Convention are now known. It was composed of a representation from a wider section of our country than was represented at Albany. It unanimously resolved in subtance that it would sustain the equal, civil and political rights of all men, without distinction of wealth, birth, learning or complexion, and would oppose the granting by law of partial or exclusive privileges. Thus it has proclaimed a creed alike conformable to the religious precepts of the New Testament and to the political doctrines of the Declaration of American Independence.

With a party taking such principles as its guide, I am ready to act, without waiting to ascertain its present strength, or to calculate the rapidity of its success. I feel satisfied that it ought to triumph, and confident that it will do so, soon or late, unless it shall swerve from those principles, of which, I confess, I am not without fears. If its success were remote in prospect, the greater would be the necessity and the duty of accelerating it by speedy and vigorous action. I therefore respectfully accept the nomination.

The principal political evils which afflict our nation are, in my opinion—1. Slavery. 2. Inequality of political and civil rights, including the practice of granting corporate and business facilities to portions of the community, and denying them, on the same terms, to other portions. 3. Excessive salaries to a portion of our public servants, which are founded on a like principle with slavery, and which greatly tend to the corruption of administrations and of parties.

Our friends have resolved to oppose the further existence of the two first-named evils. I hope they may yet include hostility to the last within the sphere of their action. Embracing three such objects, we shall be morally certain of success, and through that success of great blessings to our country.

All past experience justifies the anticipation that persuasion, argument and appeals to interest will be continually employed to make us swerve from those ends. It will require good sense, firmness and integrity to resist their blandishments. Let us, then, stand constantly on our guard. When, if ever, our organization shall be seduced from the principle of equal rights and equal justice, then will its downfall have commenced, and then will it have become the duty of the wise and the good to abandon it. No pride of opinion or of reputation should then induce them longer to lend it countenance.

If any one doubts that that portion of our enterprise which relates to slavery is of sufficient magnitude to call for action at the polls, in one form or other, from all who love justice above self-aggrandizement, let him compare the wrongs set forth in the Declaration of American Independence as a sufficient motive to a seven years' war, with those which we propose to redress through a peaceful resort to the ballot-box. Were the victims of our injustice to state the grievances which they suffer at our hands, the following might enter into the array:

"They have deprived us of the enjoyment of our inalienable rights to choose for ourselves our places of abode.

"They have wrested from us our right to select the mode of our employment.

"They have denied us freedom of speech and of the press.

"They have forbidden us the exercise of our natural faculties, and of the means of mental and moral culture which the Creator has prepared for us.

"They have rendered us prisoners for life, without even a charge of crime, while they deem a few months or years of imprisonment a sufficient penalty for confessed and hardened criminals.

"They have prohibited to us the free exercise of religion, and have excluded from our intercourse those ministers of Christianity who would preach conformity to the primary precepts of their own professed faith, viz., that they should do unto others as they would that others should do unto them.

"They have driven us to unreasonable and excessive toil.

"They have rendered us liable, at the arbitrary caprice of individuals, to be deprived of convenient food, clothing, shelter and medical aid.

"They have subjected our persons, without distinction of sex or age, to assault, outrage and even death, at the will of each member of the privileged class, by depriving the injured and their friends of the right of giving testimony in courts of justice against the aggressors.

"They have forbidden us to become instructed and qualified for reading those laws which they have imposed upon us without our consent or participation, and have doomed us to more grievous penalties for violating such laws through ignorance, than they inflict upon the enlightened of their own class, who may infract them knowingly and wilfully.

"They have systematically and by legal enactments, assisted the callous-hearted and the avaricious to sunder, at their pleasure, the ties of parental affection and of wedded love; thus rendering void, in relation to us, the commands of that revelation which they profess to believe and to obey.

"They have alleged as a pretext for their injustice, that we are characterized by a natural inferiority, providentially designed to fit us for slaves; while they have manifested their want of confidence in this dogma, by prohibiting the exercise and perfecting of our natural powers, under the avowed apprehension that such exercise and perfection would inevitably relieve us from our thraldom."

Such are the charges which might, with too much truth, be brought against us. Such are the wrongs, correctly described by Thomas Jefferson as more grievous in a single hour than those which produced the American Revolution, when continued for whole ages.

Let it be borne constantly in mind that the people of all the States of the Union are the authors or abettors of these outrages; and that the action of that portion of our friends who reside in the North, is not one of interference with the internal concerns of other States, so much as it is an effort to cease from such interference—an effort to rid themselves of an immoral obligation, unjustly to intermeddle for the purpose of aiding the aggressor and oppressing the innocent and the afflicted, to which unholy purpose we have rendered our executives and our judiciaries, our treasuries and our prisons, all subservient.

In conclusion, permit me to express a hope, that while we remain steadfast and immovable in the support of our principles, and never abate in our abhorrence of the enormous wrongs which we have undertaken to abolish, still we of the North shall, at the same time, cultivate a spirit of charity and forbearance toward our Southern brethren, in consideration of the circumstances of education, habit and interest which may palliate the guilt of the actor, without lessening the enormity of the deed. Let us remember that if our brethren of the South have erred and sinned, we have erred and sinned with them, that we have partaken of all the wrong which we charge against them, and that we have, certainly, as little as they, to allege in extenuation of our offence. Let us hope, that when the North is prepared to conform in action to its professions of principle—when it shall manifest a readiness and an urgency to cease from its share of this criminality, then will the South not be found backward in the good work.

I remain, very respectfully, your friend,

THOMAS EARLE.

EXPERIENCE.

By SARAH EARLE [871-4], afterward HADWEN.

"We run and leap by the side of a babbling brook, as if we would run a race with it: but beside waters deep, slow and lonely, our race is sullen and silent as their course."

—Sir Walter Scott, in Redgauntlet.

Marked ye that light and youthful form,
That eye so bright, that cheek so warm
With generous feeling's purest glow?
And marked ye, too, that tranquil brow?
Marked ye that light, elastic bound,
As if it spurned the unconscious ground?

That form enshrined a heart at rest.
No stormy passions shook that breast.
His soul was pure, his spirits light,
And therefore was that eye so bright.
And calm that brow, for grief and care
Had never traced a furrow there.
Of vice he had not learned the form,
And therefore was that cheek so warm:
So pure himself, his spotless mind
Glowed with the love of all his kind,
Exulted in the good around,
And hence that light, elastic bound—
That leap, as if it would keep pace
With the swift streamlet's rapid race.

* * * * * *

That form is changed: though few his years,
That lustrous eye is dimmed with tears.
And mark his brow, see, graven there,
The lines of anxious thought and care;
That cheek has lost its healthful glow,
And lo! his step is altered now.

He has been in the world and seen
The dealings of the sons of men.
He has been in the world: awhile
He basked in Fortune's specious smile;
Had many friends; and happy Love
A chaplet for his brow had wove.
His guileless breast, with candor fraught,
Ne'er harbored a suspicious thought
Of woman's faith or man's regard;
And all who sought his friendship, shared.
But changing Fortune's adverse gale
Foundered his bark of gallant sail,
And he awoke!—"And did I dream?
Are love and friendship but a theme
Existing in the poet's brain?
O! let me sleep and dream again!"

Such are the thoughts that now possess
His inmost bosom's deep recess,
And o'er his face that gloom have spread—
Thoughts that impel that measured tread—
That step so sullen, timing only
With "waters deep and slow and lonely."
